AFL Unions Vote to Pass Picket Lines At Shipyards

15,000 to March If Governor Fails To End Strike At Parley Tomorrow

AN AGREEMENT likely to permit reopening of the hard coal mines tomorrow, after a one-day stoppage, was reached by a subcommittee of negotiators. Page 12.

Strikers Defied

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, May 18.—The Bay Cities Metal Trades Council voted unanimously today to send 15,000 workers through picket lines at 11 Bay area shipyards where work on $500,000,000 in defense contracts has been at a standstill for the past week because of an A. F. of L.-C. I. O. machinists' strike.

The decision was announced by John Frey, international head of all American Federation of Labor Metal Trades Unions, after a stormy meeting of the council [illegible].

At the request of G[illegible] L. Olson, it was decided until after a m[illegible] called by the governor will a[illegible] strikers then to return [illegible] in the interest of national defense.

Frey declared, however, that A. F. of L. leaders "will not be influenced by anything that happens at the meeting of the machinists and the Governor Tuesday evening."

To Break Picket Lines

"We will return to work regardless of any illegitimate picket lines," he said. "The day and the place will be determined in advance. The international representatives in San Francisco and the business agents of the unions will go through the lines ahead of the members.

"As president, I, too, will go through.

"The reason we are not saying when and where we will break the lines is because we do not want a motley crowd of sightseers there. And we are not advertising for the benefit of the C. I. O. and the Communist Party or anybody else who

F. D. Roosevelt, Jr., Hurt as Blowout Upsets His Sedan

Walpole, Mass., May 18 (AP).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., was injured today when a blowout sent his new convertible sedan against an embankment.

The accident occurred about 5 a. m. (E. D. T.), police said, as young Roosevelt was returning to the naval training station at Newport, R. I., where he recently reported for active duty as ar ensign.

He was taken to the Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital, where it was reported he "was not seriously injured," adding "he expects to return to his ship before long." Police said he was cut on the head and face.

The accident was reported to police by another of the President's sons, John, shortly after the overturned car had been discovered at noon by State Trooper Arthur F. Chaisson, who said there had been a blowout in the right front tire. The top and fenders of the automobile were badly damaged.

New Tax Bill May Boost Profits Levy

Capitalization Credit Of 8% May Be Halved, Sponsors Indicate

By Russel Turner
United Press Staff Writer

Congressional sources said last night that proposed legislation to raise $3,500,000,000 in taxes for the defense effort "undoubtedly" will carry a provision striking harder at firms computing their excess profits on an invested capital basis.

They predicted that the present 8 per cent credit allowed on capitalization will be trimmed to 6 or even 4 per cent. Such a revision, they said, will tap firms which now can make large profits under the defense program without having to pay an excess profits tax.

This development came as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan prepared to go before the House Committee on Taxes to describe the Administration's new plan for excess profits levies.

Congressional sources said that if the Treasury does not present a plan for reducing the present 8 per cent credit, somebody in Congress will "and the bill undoubtedly will wind up with a lower percentage in it." Original revisions were computed by the Treasury to yield an extra $400,000,000.

Under present law, firms may compute excess profits by either of

7 New Ships To Be Ready In 9 Days

Yards Will Deliver Vessels Aggregating 50,289 Gross Tons

Seven more new ships in the Maritime Commission's construction program are to be delivered to operators by the shipyards in the next nine days, the commission announced last night.

The word was issued as quick action on Capitol Hill was expected to complete passage of the Administration measure to permit requisitioning of 84 idle foreign ships in United States ports to provide further help in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Both houses have passed the bill but the Senate added a provision forbidding acquisition of any ships owned by foreign governments except by purchase. Though the Maritime Commission has stated that so far as it knew all the ships affected are owned by nationals of other countries, rather than by governments, Chairman Bland, of Virginia, of the House Merchant Marine Committee, said he would ask that the bill be sent to a conference committee for consideration of the Senate amendment.

New ships to be added to the merchant fleet between May 20 and May 29, the commisison said, will aggregate 50,289 tons.

Since the 500-ship, ten-year program was started in 1938 there have

A nurse and three doctors last night fought a blaze in a Gallinger Hospital building and held the flames in check until the firemen arrived.

The firemen then stayed on for two hours to extinguish the blaze, which threatened the hospital's old isolation ward, now housing 12 patients and as many internes.

Action of the nurse and three internes, who used hand extinguishers, confined the fire to a single room.

Dr. Lawrence A. Rapee was reading in his room in the internes' wing of the two-story building when he was aroused by smoke. Investigating, he found a downstairs room ablaze. He turned in the alarm and called for aid, quickly given to him by Dr. R. A. Osbourn, Dr. J. M. Leary, and Miss Hazel Wilson, night supervisor of nurses.

Roused by the alarm, the patients in the eye-ear-throat-nose disease wing, were not transferred but were held ready for a quick removal, if necessary.

Six fire apparatus units rushed to the scene, and Acting Chief B. W. Weaver took charge of the fight.

Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of the hospital, announced, following a preliminary investigation, that a carelessly thrown cigarette was likely the cause of the blaze. The burned room was used as resting quarters for the maids. The fire marshal's office said it would make an independent investigation today.

Vessel Lost On Course To Red Sea

Egyptian Ship Had 201 Passengers; No Report Is Made Of Disaster's Cause

By the Associated Press

Alexandria, May 18.—The Egyptian steamer Zamzam, reported to have 120 Americans among her 201 passengers, has sunk in the South Atlantic, it was announced today.

A passenger liner of 8,299 tons, the vessel went down somewhere between Pernambuco and Capetown, Union of South Africa, but there were no immediate details of the cause of the sinking or the fate of the passengers.

The vessel was en route to Alexandria from New York.

The United States consulate general in Alexandria said it was informed the vessel had 201 passengers, of whom 120 were Americans, most of them Protestant and Catholic missionaries and American field service ambulance drivers and their assistants.

[The sinking immediately raised the question of whether the sunken vessel was on the general course United States ships would follow en route to the Red Sea, reopened to American ships by President Roosevelt on May 11.

[There was no report of any radio message having been received from the ship, increasing the mystery of the disaster.

[In New York no passenger list was immediately available, and no list of missionaries who might have been on the vessel was obtainable.

[Last week Germany proclaimed the northern part of the Red Sea a danger zone and said any ship approaching that area "exposes itself to destruction by mines or other weapons of war." Promptly, the Administration took the stand that the warning would be ignored.

[President Roosevelt, at his press conference Friday, declared the question was, when does a blockade exist? The test of a blockade, he added, is its effectiveness.—Editor's note.]

The ambulance corps was en route to Egypt for service with British and "Free French" forces while the missionaries intended to take up posts in various sections of Central Africa.

The Zamzam had a cargo of fertilizer, trucks, automobiles and machinery of various types. She was said to have been marked plainly with the flags of nonbelligerent Egypt.

Since the entry of Italy into the war, the Zamzam had been one of the principal links between the Middle East, South America and New York. She carried hundreds of Americans home in the past several months. She had a top speed of 14 knots.

U. S. Mediation Now Urged By Paris Press

Could Dictate Peace, Nazi-Controlled Newspapers Declare

By the United Press

Vichy, May 18.—The German-controlled French press in Paris today suddenly turned from bitter attacks on President Roosevelt to a concerted campaign urging United States mediation to end the war, with support of the French government.

The Paris newspapers said that Mr. Roosevelt must face the choice of either mediating in an effort to bring about a compromise peace or having the Uunited States drawn into the war.

The press asserted that the United States, with the strength being created by her war production, could virtually "dictate" peace terms to the Axis powers and Britain.

The sudden campaign seeking United States mediation was significant because the aris press is controlled and in some instances partly owned by the German authorities.

It also was said to reflect French public opinion.

As a consequence of approval by the French cabinet of Franco-German collaboration negotiations, France was said today to be ready to meet any choice Mr. Roosevelt may make.

If he wants to mediate peace, France will throw whatever weight

Soviet Pilots Aiding Iraq, Nazis Claim

Moscow's Permission Implied; Axis-Russian Joint Action Forecast

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, May 18.—German quarters declared today that Russian "volunteers" already are in Iraq—despite previous Soviet denials—and expressed unconcealed satisfaction over the prospects of joint Russian-Axis intervention against the British in the Middle East battle for oil.

The Germans contended that among Soviet volunteers permitted by Moscow to go to Iraq were pilots to join the Iraq air force, already declared by the British to have been augmented by Axis planes and technicians flown across French-ruled Syria

(Tass, Soviet official news agency, last Friday branded as "fabrications" Iraq newspaper reports of Russian pilots joining Iraq's air force.)

Supporting Nazi suggestions that Russia might join Germany and Italy—unofficially—in the Middle East warfare was the disclosure that German Ambassdor von Papen held a long conference yesterday with the Soviet Ambassador.

Both envoys also saw Iraq Defense Minister Majdi Shefket before he returned to Bagdad from conferences in Ankara. He was reported to have been assured enough Axis help to permit continued resistance to the British from desert bases.

Observers here saw another straw in the wind indicating a possible Russian move as a result of yesterday's exchange of Iraq-Soviet notes establishing diplomatic and trade relations between the two countries.

Turkish newspapers meanwhile asserted it was urgent that Britain occupy French-mandated Syria, next-door-neighbor of Iraq and reported pathway for Axis aid to the Middle East state.

"The British should have occupied Syria long ago; now they must do so quickly," observed the news-

'We Will Find a Way'

By William V. Nessly

Secretary of State Hull last night warned the Nation that control of the seas, heretofore a main item in American defense, is the paramount purpose of Axis powers in their program of world domination.

Should they succeed, he declared, all countries will face economic enslavement, spoliation, enforced delivery of supplies at prices set by the "master country," compulsory barter instead of mutually profitable trade, control of international business dealings by military forces and political authorities of the conquering lands.

"Every consideration of our own defense and safety requires that we see to it that Great Britain receives adequate supplies for her successful resistance," he asserted, then, brushing aside questions of the means to be employed, added:

"We will find a way to insure that the weapons pouring in ever greater volume from our factories will reach the hands which eagerly await them."

In a major address likely to rank in importance with his famous July, 1937, statement of principles, for international relations, Secretary Hull became the first Cabinet member to advance a post-war program of reconstruction. He set forth a five-point set of principles which he said should be established to govern international trade relations after the war.

The points:

"1. Extreme nationalism must not again be permitted to express itself in excessive trade restrictions.

"2. Nondiscrimination in international commercial relations must rule, so international trade may grow and prosper.

"3. Raw material supplies must be available to all nations without discrimination.

"4. International agreements regulating the supply of commodities

Duke's Main Army

By the Associated Press

Cairo (Monday), May 19.—The Duke of Aosta, Viceroy of Ethiopia and "life and soul of Italian resistance" in the nearly conquered East African domain, has decided to give up and has been given British terms for the surrender of his trapped army, it was reported early today.

The 43-year-old lanky cousin of King-Emperor Vittorio Emanuele, who has been the King's alter ego in Ethiopia since late 1937, was declared by the British to have sent emissaries to learn the conditions on which he might yield his troops, estimated at approximately 38,000 Italian and colonial soldiers.

Last month the duke quickly rejected a British demand for his unconditional surrender. Whether the British again demanded that was not divulged here.

(The British radio, in a broadcast heard by C. B. S. in New York, quoted a military spokesman in Cairo as saying the terms certainly would "include the surrender of the duke himself, the general commanding and the Italian forces" in Amba Alija.)

Main Point of Resistance

It was said the Viceroy had with him 7,000 Italian officers and men, in addition to colonial troops.

The stand at Amba Alija, a mountain stronghold 280 miles northeast of Addis Ababa, was the main point of final resistance put up by the Viceroy, who, as an air corps officer, helped subdue the kingdom of Haile Selassie.

Only two Fascist strongholds remain—in the Condar area northwest of Addis Ababa, and Gimma in the south.

22 Axis Planes Destroyed

Meanwhile, the R. A. F. took the offensive on all fronts in the Middle East, destroying 22 Axis aircraft and damaging a score of others while losing only three of its own, the Middle East command announced in a communique.

Heavy British bombers raided principal Axis bases at Cyrenaica while fighters supported ground troops harassing columns of convoys, destroying at least 20 vehicles and damaging others on the Tobruk-Bardia Road.

Six German war planes were destroyed in attacks on bases in Greece and at least a score were damaged, the communique said, while the Germans lost another

All-In Defense

Atlanta Prisoners Jeer at Hitler, Double Output to Aid Defense

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, May 18.—In Atlanta's high-walled Federal penitentiary where strikes never halt work and sabotage is extremely unlikely, a thousand beaver-busy prisoners have boosted their production-for-defense 100 per cent in 30 days.

The step-up started when Warden Joseph W. Sanford called the men into the baseball bleachers on the prison playground, told them of pressing defense needs and said:

"This is your chance to prove to the world that men in prison are not only loyal and decent but will stand ready for whatever is asked of them in the present ravaged world."

Industries Superintendent Thomas G. Roche said the men caught up the challenge with a whoop, went back to the spinning mill on a double-shift basis and proceeded to double the output in all departments so that now a dozen freight cars a day roll out defense supplies.

In the factory where they whip together T. N. T. bags, shell covers, flying packs for the Air Corps and ship awnings for the Navy, the prisoners hung a huge, frowning cartoon of Hitler over work tables, drawn by a convict-artist. The cartoon is captioned: "Let us help defeat him."

The prison publication, The Atlantian, proudly pointed to the production boost and wrote that it "should shame some of those outside whose defeatism has dissolved their backbones into what might be called —appeasement sauce."

The Federal Prison Industries, all of them now in defense production, produce materials that range from tailored naval officers' uniforms to tents for selectee cantonments.

The mill workers in the 28-acre walled-in institution are paid on a piecework basis and with boosted production they get proportionate pay increases. The monthly income ranges from $6 to $18 each. About two-thirds is sent to relatives outside, the remainder spent at the comissary.

Warden Sanford, veteran of 30 years Government service, jovial yet firm, says production still is climbing and that the patriotic spirit giving impetus to the work remains high.

While 1,000 of the 2,746 prisoners now are in actual production, several hundred more are attending vocational schools in the prison, soon to take their places at the looms and before the welding tables.

A prisoner writing in the Atlantian suggested an immediate survey of State prisons by the Office of Production Management to take advantage of these "vast reservoirs of production skill."

Throne Dusted Off

Savoy Duke Named Croat King By Italians in Pomp and Rain

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, May 18.—The ancient house of Savoy gave a new sovereign to Europe today when Aimone, Duke of Spoleto, was designated King of Croatia.

The new kingdom of Croatia, in accordance with agreements signed today, is carefully hamstrung, so far as its foreign or military and naval powers are concerned. It is a country now fully dependent on Italy, and presumably Germany, for protection, self-defense and indeed for its very existence. Even its economy is clearly going to depend on links with Italy and Germany.

Territorially, Italy received today one of fascism's greatest revindications—that part of the Dalmatian Coast she asked for in the treaty of London of 1915 as the price of entering the World War and which was refused afterwards. One of the treaties signed made the so-called "classic Dalmatia" part of the kingdom of Italy, that is to say the coast from Zara to Split, including those two ports, as well as Sebenico and Trau.

Italy received all the islands of the Dalmatian Coast, which formerly belonged to Yugoslavia, except Pago, Brazza and Lesina. Susak, Yugoslavia's rival to Fiume, becomes Italian.

Finally, and by no means least important, Italy got the former Austrian naval base of Kotor and

French Empire May Prove Crux of War

By Glenn Babb

New York, May 18 (The Special News Service).—The French Empire was a mighty bulwark for the Allies in the World War but its fall might open the way to German victory in the present conflict.

Britain fears that Germany and her allies are preparing to deliver from French territory blows that would threaten the survival of the British Empire.

The United States, committed to supply Britain the means of victory and to defend the Western Hemisphere, is hardly less concerned and President Roosevelt has expressed formally American anxieties.

France's overseas empire is the second largest in the world, 4,618,000 square miles—nearly 20 times the area of France in Europe—with a population of 65,000,000.

The most populous single unit of the French Empire, Indo-China, has fallen under domination of Japan, a potential enemy of Britain.

Nearly all the remainder has remained subservient to the Vichy government of Marshal Petain, who now indicates France is embarking on a program of "collaboration" with Germany.

Few Loyal to De Gaulle

The only French lands loyal to Britain are the "Free French" colonies under Gen. Charles De Gaulle, African jungle and desert land and tiny Pacific islands.

Now German planes and tanks are reported moving through French-mandated Syria to strike for a smash at the Suez Canal.

Japan, allied with Germany and Italy, has acquired bases in French Indo-China which may be used for an attempt to conquer Singapore and destroy Britain's Far Eastern dominions.

This is the present line-up of French overseas territories:

1. Under rule of the Vichy government (and presumably subject to Vichy's orders in the program of "collaboration" with Germany):

French North Africa, Algeria, Tunisia, Morocco), 1,057,000 square miles, population 16,000,000.

French West Africa, 1,816,000 suare miles, population, 3,600,000.

Syria and Lebanon (mandated), 58,000 suare miles, population, 3,600,000.

French America (Martinique, Guadeloupe, Guiana, St. Pierre and Miquelon), 35,000 square miles, population 450,000.

French Somaliland in East Africa and the Islands of Madagascar and reunion in the Indian Ocean, totaling about 238,000 square miles and 4,000,000 population, and a few smaller units.

2. Nominally subject to Vichy but under Japanese domination: French Indo-China, 281,000 square miles, population 24,000,000.

3. "Free French"—actively allied with Britain:

French equatorial Africa (Gabun, Middle Congo, Ubangi-Shari and Chad) and the Cameroons, 900,000 square miles, population 6,000,000.

French Oceania (New Caledonia, New Hebrides, Marquesas, Tahiti, etc.), 10,000 square miles, population 100,000.

French India (Pondicherry, Chadernagore, etc.), 196 square miles, population 300,000.

Weygand Rules

North Africa and West Africa have been welded into a single military and administrative unit under general Maxime Weygand. He rules over about 2,873,000 square miles with 31,000,000 inhabitants—two-thirds the area and half the population of the whole empire—and commands a veteran, disciplined army of perhaps 250,000 men.

Weygand's position has been considered one of the strongest cards in old Marshal Petain's hand in his bargaining with the Germans. Weygand has proclaimed his loyalty to the marshal and his readiness to defend his territory to the last against any aggressor. But the latest phase of German-French "collaboration" raises doubts as to how far North Africa can retain its comparative freedom.

French authority in America centers in the West Indies Island of Martinique, where French naval forces remain under close British—and United States—surveillance. The American colonies all remain under Vichy administrators although there have been numerous reports of attempts—notably in Guiana and St. Pierre and Miquelon—to go over to de Gaulle.

Vichy's new arrangements with Berlin have raised the question in Washington as to whether they involve a change in sovereignty for French America, calling for action under the Monroe Doctrine, such as was taken in the case of Greenland.

"Free Frenchmen" assert there already has been considerable German penetration in Martinique and that gestapo agents are active there.

Two British Gladiator fighters, tangling with two Messerschmitt fighters over Camp Raschid, near Bagdad, in the second day of clashes with German planes over Iraq were declared to have downed both of the opposing craft without a scratch to themselves.

From this brush, the communique said, the Gladiators went on to machine-gun Iraq motor transports.

Other R. A. F. units bombed airdromes at Mosul, in northern Iraq, and Camp Rashid, near Bagdad. At Mosul, returning pilots said one big plane was burned and others badly damaged.

Returning again to the assault of Bengasi, main port of entry for Axis troops and supplies in North Africa, the R. A. F. blasted that Libyan port Friday night, the air command related, starting tremendous fires which blazed furiously long after the raiders left.

Derna and El Gazala were other Libyan targets, and at the former port particularly heavy explosions were declared set off among harbor buildings and at the airdrome.

At Salum, on the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, British fighters were credited with downing two Messerschmitts. At Fort Capuzzo, Axis troops were strafed.

Axis planes attempting to machine-gun British airdrome on the Greek island of Crete were intercepted, the war bulletin said, and three Messerschmitt fighters and a Junkers bomber were shot down by R. A. F. fighters and four other Axis craft by anti-aircraft guns. A number of others were declared winged and sent fluttering back toward their bases.

Today's war bulletin said counter-attacking Australians at Tobruk had recaptured a number of strong points in the outer defenses of the beleaguered Libyan port and had taken 25 Germans as prisoners.

Rome Admits "Difficulties"

Rome, May 18 (AP).—The Italian high command frankly admitted today that the predicament of the Duke of Aosta's forces in northern Ethiopia is "becoming more difficult from hour to hour because of the scarcity of means, the losses suffered and the impossibility of carrying away and tending the wounded."

Despite the growing seriousness of the situation, the Fascist high command asserted the dwindling defenders of Amba Alija were continuing to resist "with great courage."

"Our position," said Vajit, "as a nonbelligerent has become important and critical. These developments might favor the personal ambition of some Moslems, but won't work to the advantage of Islam as a whole."

The references of Nazi circles to Russian-Axis intervention in Iraq were not further explained here.

(German quarters were still silent on reports of German tanks and airplanes going to Iraq's adi, as reported by the British.

The British radio, however, quoted a Rumanian broadcast yesterday to the effect that Germany had started the movement of infantry through the Bosporus, bound presumably for Syria and Iraq. Another London broadcast heard in New York said German officers already were leading Iraqis fighting the British.

Iraqis Claim Victory

Beirut, Lebanon, May 18 (AP).—The Iraq high command today claimed destruction of eight British planes in a raid on Cin El Debane Airdrome, 50 miles west of Bagdad, on the shores of Lake Habbaniyah, and the repulse of British patrols with heavy imperial losses in clashes on the western Iraq front.

Spoleto Chosen King of the Croats

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SPLITTING BOOTY—As Croatia received an Italian King, Rome reports said Italy would get part of the Dalmatian coast (1) and earlier reports from Berlin forecast Italy also would get a corner of northern Yugoslavia (2), that Germany would absorb Carniola in northwest Yugoslavia (3), and that Hungary would take territory along the Rumanian border (4). The new Croat state is indicated the coast down to Albania.

That left two very important outlets to the new Croat Kingdom, one from Zagreb, which will include special facilities for the use of the port of Split, and another from the rich mineral districts of Bosnia to the port of Ragusa. Italy's little enclave of Zara now becomes very large, but it still remains detached from the metropolitan district.

The exact delimitation of the frontiers, including the provinces of Ljubljana, will be made by a mixed commission. Incidentally, it is to be noted that Croatia's eastern and southern frontiers have yet to be established.

After the territorial accord two more agreements were signed tying Croatia into a neat bundle. One was of a military character, concerning the Adriatic shore. Croatia undertakes not to institute or maintain any military fortifications or defenses, whether on land, sea or in the air, or any base of operations or military installations susceptible of being used for bellicose purposes in the zone along the Adriatic. The Croat government likewise declared that it has no intention of creating a navy.

The last agreement was a "treaty of guarantee and collaboration." By it Italy guarantees the independence and territorial integrity of the Kingdom of Croatia and on its part the Croat government undertakes not to contract international obligations which are not in conformity with the guarantees of the spirit of the treaty signed with Italy. This treaty is to last 25 years.

However, that is not all that the "independent kingdom of Croatia" undertakes to do. For she is going to "collaborate with the Italian armed forces in everything that concerns the organization of her army." Finally, there are going to be customs and monetary accords, agreements regarding railway and maritime traffic, the treatment of minorities and even cultural accords.

Rome went through all the ceremonies with that lack of concern which comes from having in the last 2,600 years seen innumerable kings and emperors crowned. No people in the world is so blase about the pageantry of history as the Romans, and today, anyway, was a nasty, rainy day. However, the city was gay with Croat and Italian flags and there were many thousands of people in their proper places at the proper moment.

The Croat delegation was driven first to the Via Madama in a limousine and from there in royal coaches drawn by white horses to the Quirinal Palace. On the Via Flaminia the horses of one coach shied and balked, throwing the coachman and cracking his skull, which was considered a bad omen by some bystanders.

The actual designation of the new King in the throne room of the palace was a scene of great dignity and color. King Victor Emanuel entered in the uniform of a field marshal. Behind him came the Prince of Piedmont and other persons of the royal house, including the Duke of Spoleto in his admiral's uniform. Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano followed to take up positions at the right of the throne.

The Croat delegation was headed by the Poglavnik (the Croat equivalent to fuehrer) Dr. Pavelic.

The ceremony consisted of two brief speeches, one by Dr. Pavelic, asking King Victor Emanuel to dgeisnate a King, and the other by the Italian Monarch, naming the Duke of Spoleto. King Victor's address was notable for its strong fascist terminology.

"The presence of a Prince of Savoy on the throne of the independent state of Croatia," he said, "testifies to the will of your people to collaborate with Italy in the spirit of closest friendship. We consider the rebirth of the Croat nation as a happy omen for the new order which is being affirmed in Europe."

When the Croat delegation went to the Palazzo Venezia to sign the various accords, the crowd shouted for the Duce and Dr. Pavelic and they came out on the balcony many times.

[Pavelic was later received by Pope Pius XII.

Text of Hull Speech on the War and Economics

The text of Secretary Hull's radio address last night follows:

Tonight we inaugurate another annual National Foreign Trade Week. You know as well as I that now there is little use in our talking about and planning for foreign trade unless the outcome of the war is favorable to the free peoples of the world. For trade means free bargaining to mutual advantage. To us it does not mean exploitation by military cliques backed by cannon. And so, for the present, our foreign trade consists more and more, and will consist more and more, of making and placing in the hands of nations which are resisting unlawful attack the tools of self-defense. This trade, like all trade, is futile if the goods produced do not reach those for whom they are intended.

We are a practical people. When we set ourselves to a task we finish it. We have set ourselves to the task of arming and supplying those whose successful defense is vital to our security. I have said before, and I repeat: we will not permit this purpose to be frustrated. We will find a way to insure that the weapons pouring in ever greater volume from our factories will reach the hands which eagerly await them. Only as we stand strong and united in this purpose, can we look forward to a brighter day.

We have seen during the past year the continued spread of ruthless aggression by nations bent upon world domination. We have seen the enslavement of every nation which was so unfortunate as to stand in the way and was not strong enough to repel aggression. Nations which were unable to protest themselves have been crushed by military frightfulness that has known no bounds. In each territory taken over, organized brutality has been carried to the utmost lengths in order to coerce conquered peoples into unwilling support of new conquests and an ever-widening circle of enslavement.

Nation in Mortal Danger

The safety of our Nation, as of every free nation, is in mortal danger in so far as our people permit themselves to be lulled into a false sense of security by those who mistakenly assume that two oceans plus a natural desire to be at peace with all the world will protect us. The paramount purpose of the leaders of the movement of conquest is to secure control of the high seas, which control is essential to the execution of their program of world domination. Every consideration of our own defense and safety requires that we see to it that Great Britain receives adequate supplies for her successful resistance.

At this critical moment we must not be weakened by internal division, we must devote our whole energy to essential tasks. The production and transfer of essential supplies to those countries which are actively resisting aggression demand sacrifice of time and substance, and making of maximum effort, on the part of each and every American citizen. Delays in meeting full schedules of production of essential military supplies, whether caused by business complacency or by strikes, can and should be avoided, for they gravely endanger the safety of the Nation. Our greatest national effort must be made, not for the sake of other countries, but primarily for the sake of and to ensure our own security. Either the spread of lawlessness in the world must be brought to a halt or we shall soon find ourselves surrounded by aggressors and compelled to fight, virtually alone and against great odds, for our own national existence.

These are obvious dangers that lie immediately ahead. But they are not the only dangers. To get a more complete picture of what they involve, it is necessary to envisage the kind of an conomic world that would exist if the would-be conquerors were to win. Their current pronouncements and practices provide an ample warning on that score.

The key to their economic program is contained in one simple word—conquest. Every territory that they conquer is reduced forthwith to an economic master-and-slave relationship. The economic structure of the enslaved country is forcibly reshaped and systematically subordinated to the economy of the ruling country. Within the entire tributary area, autarchy or economic self-sufficiency is set up as the central feature of economic policy. At the center of this widely dispersed web of captive nations, the master country wields its vastly enlarged powers in an unceasing effort to ensnare, overwhelm, and enslave every remaining free nation in the world.

The tragic experience of the conquered countries of Europe provides unassailable evidence of how this system is applied in the field of trade. Under it, trade is reduced essentially to enforced barter. The would-be conqueror forces delivery to him, at his own price, of the goods he wants; and enforces this arrangement by every device of discrimination and arbitrary control. There is not the slightest pretense of promoting mutually profitable trade with other countries upon the basis of equality and fair dealing. It is a system based upon the principle, not of economic cooperation, but of economic spoliation.

In the face of these facts, no one need be in doubt as to the situation that would confront this nation, in the realm of trade as elsewhere, in the event of an Axis victory. For the past seven years our government has taken the leadership in an effort to reopen the channels of international trade and thus to assist in world economic restoration, with resulting political stability, from which all countries, great and small, would benefit. It has proceeded throughout upon broad principles of cooperation and fair dealing, and has recognized that only mutually profitable trade can be truly beneficial and enduring. These principles are broad enough to include every country willing to cooperate in a program of economic peace. By the same taken they stand at the opposite pole from the predatory policies and methods of the totalitarians. Between the two systems there can be no workable adjustment.

Excess of Nationalism

After the first World War an attempt was made to reorganize the world on a sound basis. New institutions were created and new methods of cooperation were established. All peoples shared the hope that a new era in international relations had begun.

Unhappily, shortly after the close of the World War, power fell into the hands of groups which advocated political and economic nationalism in their most extreme forms. The inevitable effects, politically, economically and socially, during the years that followed were utterly disastrous. The outcome was division and weakening, and final breakdown, of the necessary internatoinal foundation on which peace is based.

Knowing these facts as we do, it is none too early to lay down at least some of the principles by which policies must be guided at the conclusion of the war, to press for a broad program of world economic reconstruction, and to consider tentative plans for the application of those policies.

Nondiscrimination in Trade

The main principles, as proven by experience, are few and simple:

1. Extreme nationalism must not aagin be permitted to express itself in excessive trade restrictoins.

2. Nondiscrimination in international commercial relations must be the rule, so that international trade may grow and prosper.

3. Raw material supplies must be available to all nations without discrimination.

4. International agreements regulating the supply of commodities must be so handled as to protect fully the interests of the consuming countries and their people.

5. The institutions and arrangements of international finance must be so set up that they lend aid to the essential enterprises and the continuous development of all countries, and permit the payment through processes of trade consonant with the welfare of all countries.

Program of Strength

Measures taken to give effect to these principles must be freely open to every nation which desires a peaceful life in a world at peace and is willing to cooperate in maintaining that peace.

Such a program has strength and endurance. It will stand long after the war-built arrangements forced on disheartened or imprisoned peoples by military conquest have fallen to pieces and have vanished utterly.

There still are people who do not see that if, when the present conflict ends, we do not have a system of open trade, they will not be able either to buy or to sell except on terms really laid down by the military forces and political authorities of the countries with which they have to deal.

Free World Needed

Unless a system of open trade becomes firmly established, there will be chronic political instability and recurrent economic collapse. There will never be peace in any real sense of the term.

In the final reckoning, the problem becomes one of establishing the foundations of an international order in which independent nations cooperate freely with each other for their mutual gain—of a world order, not new but renewed, which liberates rather than enslaves.

We shall not be able to do this until we have a world free from imminent military danger, and clear of malign political intrigue. At present the world is scourged by both. We can expect no healthy development until the menace of conquest has been brought to an end. Only then will the time have arrived when steel is valued, not in terms of the bombs that can be made of it, but in terms of the instruments of peaceful life into which it can be forged; and when foreign trade has reverted again from cargoes of weapons and explosives to commodities that nourish and heal and enrich their consumers.

This Nation is resolved to evade no issues and to face harsh facts. We believe that there can be created a safer and more prosperous world. We have the tools—the resources, the brains, the hands—with which to help make it such. But first the tide of force must be turned back. Once that is done, we and other nations can reestablish an open, cooperative economic life in which trade may increase, economic welfare may grow, civilization may advance, and the peaceful and benevolent instincts of masses of now prostrate people may once more flourish in the really worthwhile ways of life.

Hull Calls for Open Trade After War

must be so handled as to protect fully the interests of the consuming countries and their people.

"5. The institutions and arrangements of international finance must be so set up that they lend aid to the essential enterprises and the continuous development of all countries, and permit the payment through processes of trade consonant with the welfare of all countries."

The address, broadcast in connection with the celebration of Foreign Trade Week, contained an appeal that "at this critical moment" the Nation be not weakened by internal divisions.

Delays in production of essential military supplies, "whether caused by business complacency or by strikes," Hull declared, "gravely endanger the safety of the Nation."

At the outset of the address, the Secretary commented that much of this country's foreign trade this year would be in "the tools of self-defense" and added that this trade would be "futile" if the goods produced did not reach those for whom they were intended.

"We are a practical people," he continued. "When we set ourselves to a task we finish it. We have set ourselves to the task of arming and supplying those whose successful defense is vital to our security. I have said it before and I repeat: We will not permit this purpose to be frustrated."

At another point he warned that "the safety of our Nation, as of every free nation, is in mortal danger in so far as our people permit themselves to be lulled into a false sense of security by those who mistakenly assume that two oceans plus a natural desire to be at peace with all the world will protect us."

Emphasizing the need for seeing that Britain gets munitions, he warned:

"Either the spread of lawlessness in the world must be brought to a halt or we shall soon find ourselves surrounded by aggressors and compelled to fight, virtually alone and against great odds, for our own national existence."

Contrasts U. S. and Axis Steps

Only 24 hours earlier President Roosevelt had warned that "already, and to a very serious extent, military and economic aggression have circumscribed the area within which the principles upon which we base our international commercial relations can operate."

Hull contrasted steps taken by this country "to reopen the channels of interational trade" with the economic program of the dictators based on conquest.

"We believe that there can be created a safer and more prosperous world," he said. "We have the tools—the resources, the brains, the hands—with which to help make it such. But first the tide of force must be turned back. Once that is done, we and other nations can reestablish an open, cooperative economic life in which trade may increase, economic welfare may grow, civilization may advance, and the peaceful and benevolent instincts of masses of now prostrate people may once more flourish in the really worthwhile ways of life."

Unless a system of open trade is firmly established, he said, "There will be chronic political instability and recurrent economic collapse. There will never be peace in any real sense of the term."

200 Aliens Seized In Sudden Drive

Biggest Haul Made In New York; Aimed At Axis Seamen

By the Associated Press

More than 200 aliens were under arrest on either seacoast last night following a sudden roundup ordered by the Justice Department to seize foreign seamen and others who were in this country illegally.

The biggest haul was made by 500 New York detectives, immigration officers and border patrolmen who rounded up 92 in lodging houses, cafes and bars. These, with 34 taken in New Jersey, were locked up at Ellis Island, most of them on charges of illegal entry and violation of immigration laws.

Twenty-eight were rounded up in Florida and 29 in California. Officials at Boston said the drive there was "highly successful" but declined to disclose the number arrested.

The roundup, launched unexpectedly by the Justice Department Saturday night, was said to be aimed particularly at German and Italian seamen, but the New York arrests included also Greeks, Swedes, Portuguese, Spaniards and at least one Englishman.

Justice Department officials said the search was being concentrated in the seacoast cities of New York, Boston, Baltimore, Miami, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland.

However, in Seattle R. P. Bonham, District immigration director, said "we are up to date on aliens around here." He explained that his district had not waited to make wholesale arrests, "but kept right on top of them as we find them."

Two seamen were arrested in Baltimore on warrants Deputy Immigration Commissioner Albert R. Archibald said charged overstaying the peirod allowed in work permits. Archibald said "A number of other warrants" are outstanding.

At Jacksonville, Fla., W. W. Eyster, southeastern district immigration director, said four more aliens were arrested yesterday at Tampa. Seven were rounded up there and 17 at Miami Saturday.

Eyster said arrests in the district were on a continuing basis and the southeast was being kept "pretty clean" of aliens. He disclosed that approximately 150 German and Italian aliens were being held in the southeastern district in addition to "about 100 seamen" held under prosecution by the U. S. Marshal.

Fourteen aliens were seized in the Philadelphia area and taken to the United States immigration station at Gloucester, N. J. James L. Hughes, district immigration director, said they were Germans, Italians and Slavs.

Immigration officials in New York said hearings probably would begin tomorrow at Ellis Island.

William M. Marshall, assistant director of immigration, who was in charge of the New York area roundup, said the Government men had been careful to weed out persons with papers in order. He predicted that only one or two of those seized would escape deportation.

In one case, a fist fight occurred between a German and an Italian as they left a patrol wagon. Guards said their argument started over the war situation.

One immigration inspector, indicating the possible scope of the round-up, asserted that "when we really get going, Ellis Island won't be big enough to hold them."

Marshall said he believed there had been no more arrests of aliens in the New York metropolitan area during the day.

Churchill Gets Secret Report About Hess

By the Associated Press

London, May 18.—Prime Minister Churchill pondered today a detailed secret report on statements by Rudolf Hess since the Nazi deputy fuehrer parachuted to earth in Scotland—and the restive British public hoped he'd lift at least a corner of the veil from the mystery before [illegible] Commons this week.

The British Broadcasting Corporation continued a barrage of broadcasts to Germany, playing the Hess affair for all it is worth.

Its latest theme to listening Germans was that the Nazi radio is keeping quiet before its home audience, while pouring out a variety of conflicting accounts for foreign consumption.

The British public itself appears anxious for clarification of widely differing versions likewise published here.

But some curbstone kibitzers suggested that official silence thus far might be a sign the government has obtained such valuable information from Hess that it would be able to wring maximum benefit from keeping the Germans in long suspense.

British broadcasts beamed toward Germany referred to "widespread reports of an extensive purge in Germany and many arrests of Hess' associates, especially occultists"—a reference to German assertions that the No. 3 Fuehrer had been ill-advised by fortune tellers and mesmerizers.

The Germans also were told that all telephone communication between Germany and Sweden was cut at 6 p. m. Friday, "precisely the same thing as happened Saturday night—the night of the Hess flight."

Hundreds of Arrests

London, May 18 (U.P.).—Rumors reached London tonight that "hundreds of persons" including the wife of Rudolf Hess have been arrested in Germany in the past two or three days as result of the still-enigmatic flight of the deputy fuehrer.

Agents of the Gestapo were said in a Swedish report to have questioned Willy Messerschmitt, famous airplane designer and builder, on suspicion of providing Hess with a specially equipped plane.

L'Affaire Hess Linked to Solomon, Nebuchadnezzar

Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux, Washington pastor of the Radio Church of God, yesterday referred his radio congregation to two ancient kings, Solomon and Nebuchadnezzar, for help in unraveling the mystery of Rudolf Hess' flight to Scotland 10 days ago.

The "context" of his sermon was: "And they came to David McLean's home in Scotland and found Hess sitting clothed in his right mind." Drawing liberally upon Biblical quotation, the Elder said the Nazi leader went there "to show to the world that when a man is converted, he will love his enemies."

Hitler, the Elder declared, was another Nebuchadnezzar with a bad dream.

French in Syria Warn British They'll Fight

By C. L. Sulzberger

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, May 18.—France's high commissioner to Syria and Lebanon, Gen. Henri Dentz, warned the British empire tonight that the French armies in the mandated territories were ready to defend themselves gainst British attack and were ready to reply to force with force.

This announcement was broadcast by Gen. Dentz over the Beirut radio only a few hours after the same station had announced that France would remain by the side of Germany and the new order.

The immediate interpretation of these statements by diplomatic circles here was that open warfare between France and Britain may break out at any hour.

Initiative still appears to remain with the British and it is not known whether the British commander in Egypt, Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, has decided to make a factual reply to the bold statement of Gen. Dentz or whether an eleventh-hour conference will be held in an effort to stave off this catastrophic dispute between two former allies.

Appeal to Natives

In a broadcast from Beirut tonight, the French military commissioner says:

"French Lebanese and Syrians, you have heard the appeal of Marshal Petain; you have heard his moving words replete with firmness and wisdom, words inspired with an ardent desire for peace and order.

"At the same moment in which he was speaking English airplanes attacked our airdromes without warning. Once more after Mers el Kebir and Dakar, England has killed French lads and has attacked French shores.

"The British government, in order to justify these aggressions against France, has accused it of not having forcibly repelled German airplanes flying over Syria, some of which were forced to make landings. Nothing can justify this accusation. Marshal Petain has confirmed that France has no aggressive intentions against England. The privilege used by our former enemy was strictly within the terms of the armistice.

"This is the truth. All the accusations of Britain against France are only calumnies and criminal pretext. But we will act accordingly with calm and dignity.

"Army Is Ready"

"Certainly we French, Syrians and Lebanese are in an unprecedentedly close association and will collaborate in brotherly fashion against any act of hostility of which the victims are innocent populations.

"I have received the mission of defending the soil of Syria and the Lebanon.

"I shall fulfill this mission inflexibly.

"The army is ready to reply to force with force."

It was the prevailing belief of well-informed quarters here, following Gen. Dentz's speech, that a large-scale campaign between the British and the French, German and Italian armies in the Middle East was about to begin.

Edge Has 'Lingering Hope' Gen. Weygand Will Act

Copyright by New York Times

A "lingering hope" was expressed in Washington yesterday by former Ambassador to France Walter E. Edge that Gen. Weygand's forces in the French colonies may break away from collaboration with Germany.

In an interview, Edge said it was his opinion that it would have been much better for the future of France "to have refused any and all concessions to Germany even to the point of having the puppet government at Vichy, existing only on sufferance, terminated.

"In this way the only military assets left of France, its navy, North African army, supply bases, and air equipment, so coveted by Hitler, could at least be used to help Britain's uphill struggle, the ultimate success of which is the only chance for France.

"I still have a lingering hope the Weygand forces in the colonies will see it that way. They at least are to some extent removed from immediate Hitler reprisals. On the other hand if they remain passive to his wishes their usefulness to France ceases forever."

Germans Admit Damage In British Raid on Cologne

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 18.—Damages to railway facilities, destruction of houses and the killing and wounding of many civilians in British bombings in western Germany, particularly the Rhineland city of Cologne, were admitted by German authorities today.

Both high explosive and incendiary bombs were showered in the Saturday night attack, the high command said, but the British were declared to have paid the price of two planes shot down by night fighters.

German air forces claimed important hits during the night in both English Channel and Crete attacks. They said two ships were sunk, four others damaged near England and two tankers and a freighter set afire by dive-bombers at Suda Bay in the Greek island.

The high command declared artillery fire halted several British counterattacks from isolated Tobruk in North Africa. In fighting at Salum and Fort Capuzzo the Germans claimed the capture of four British tanks, other war materials and prisoners.

Propaganda Assails United States

On the propaganda front Germany trained her big guns on alleged war agitation in the United States.

The biggest and blackest headlines in Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter said "Roosevelt's Government betrays its war aims: Germany may be placed fro all time under police supervision of United States of America, Roosevelt aims to make Europe a colony for English-speaking exploiters."

These headlines were over a dispatch from Stockholm, Sweden, which reported the Newport, R. I., Naval College address of Navy Secretary Knox. The conclusions were drawn from the statement attributed to him that the rising of another Hitler in 30 years can be prevented "if a second time we do not permit police control over Germany to be taken from our hands."

Europe Against World

[The Knox statement said "we can rest assured that when Germany and its will of force is ultimately defeated in Europe another Hitler 20 or 30 years hence will be able to do the same thing in an even shorter period of time if the world again relinquishes its policing power."]

Most of the German press devoted long articles to the theme that in the present state the war is becoming a conflict of Europe against most of the rest of the world.

The press spread the impression that the "American-English" blockade and other war policies are hitting the Scandinavian nations, France and the Balkans as much as Germany and that consequently Europe is swiftly becoming a political, economic and military unit which soon will be acting as one state.

R. A. F. Blasts Cologne for 2d Straight Night

By the Associated Press

London, May 18.—British bombers hurled a "constant rain of bombs" on the German City of Cologne last night in the second consecutive night raid on that Nazi industrial center and left huge fires blazing among many buildings, the British reported tonight.

(Berlin authorities acknowledged damage to railway facilities, the destruction of houses and the killing and wounding of many civilians in western Germany, particularly in Cologne.)

Unfavorable weather failed to stop the strong force of aircraft flying against Cologne on Friday and Saturday nights, the British air ministry said, and the raids were carried out "successfully."

"Reports by the crews show how concentrated and violent was the (Saturday night) attack the news service said.

"They scarcely had begun to bomb before large fires sprang up to meet the constant rain of bombs. There was one particularly large fire in which many buildings were ablaze."

Other bombers spread over Nazi-held points on the continent while the Germans gave the British a virtual "night off" from raids.

The Air Ministry reported docks at Rotterdam, Holland, and Boulogne, France, and other objectives in "enemy-occupied territory" were attacked and unidentified "French and Dutch harbors" were raided.

Only one bomber was missing after the night's raids, the Ministry said. It was acknowledged that two fighters were missing from patrol yesterday but the ministry added that a British fighter downed a German fighter, shooting it into the sea off the southeast coast.

Aside from sporadic air activities along parts of England's coast, in which the streets of one town were machine-gunned and a single Nazi plane was shot down, Britain had virtually no air raids tonight.

Synagogue Damaged By Bomb in Marseille

Marseille, May 18 (AP).—A synagogue was damaged by a time-bomb last night in the latest series of anti-Jewish incidents in this "refugee capital of Europe."

The Vichy government ordered 107 more Jewish-owned shops in the Paris region placed under Gentile administrators.

Convoys Mean Another AEF, Landon Warns

By the Associated Press

Topeka, Kan., May 18.—Alf M. Landon said today "the greatest deception that is being practiced upon us is the implication that we can have war and not suffer the consequences of war.

In an address prepared for a C.B.S. broadcast sponsored by the America First Committee, the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee asserted that if this country uses its ships to deliver materials to warring nations it means war for us—another A. E. F.

President Roosevelt has said convoys mean war, the former Kansas Governor said, adding:

"It is a shock to the moral conscience of the Nation to see how quickly the campaign promises of last fall are being circumvented in Administration circles. They are seeking to do indirectly what the President said he would not do. The end may be the same—war.

"We were told last fall 'no fighting' and there has been no change in the situation since then, the possibilities of which were not contemplated when those promises were made."

Landon charged that some of the most radical of the "New Deal war crowd" are "attempting to lay the groundwork for the ultimate destruction of private business by blaming its management for the deficiencies of our national defense efforts."

It is greatly to every American's interest that England win, he asserted, "but I do not think our security depends upon an English victory.

"I don't mean to say that we are not in dire peril. We are. But the argument that we should go to war because of economic conditions under a German victory is to me a narrow and hateful reason for war.

"Free labor will always whip forced labor, and without going to war to do it.

"This is a second time within a generation that we have been told our security depends on England. It is coming too close to a habit of permanent thinking for a strong, virile people like us."

New Bill May Hike Levy on Profits

these methods:

1. Invested capital. Firms are allowed an 8 per cent return on their invested capital. Any profits over that amount are taxable under the excess profits tax law.

2. Average earnings. A firm may deduct 95 per cent of its period 1936-39 as normal earnings. Anything over that amount is classified as excess profits.

The excess profits tax ranges up to 50 per cent.

Congressional circles contended that under that system, for every $4 in excess profits tax paid by firms computing on the average earnings basis, those computing on the invested capital method pay only $1.

They said that a reduction of the 8 per cent allowance thus would hit firms who now "make a lot of money without paying excess profits taxes."

The Treasury has been considering a redefinition of invested capital to include a fair purchase price for the business, good will, etc.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday called on the Administration to submit a "realistic" tax program to the country to minimize "the uncertainties created by confused proposals for revenue legislation.

The United States Chamber, which has not participated in the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee on the ground that the various Administration proposals were indefinite, declared:

"Only by a careful balance in taxes can adequate revenues be obtained with a fair distribution of the burden."

It urges that Congress consider certain fundamental questions in framing the tax bill. Among them, it cited:

"How much money will be required for national defense preparations in the coming fiscal year, and, assuming no shooting war, in the following year? (Morgenthau estimated $12,000,000,000 and Henderson $18,000,000,000 for next year).

"How much will be required to carry on necessary ordinary Government operations? (Morgenthaus estimated $7,000,000,000.)

"How much of this money should be raised by taxes and by borrowing? (The Administration formula is two-thirds through taxes and one-third through borrowing.)

"What proportion of the national income can be safely diverted to Government purposes? (Federal, State and local taxes were estimated by Undersecretary of the Treasury Bell to consume 25 per cent of income.)

"How much can ordinary Government expenses be reduced?" (Morgenthaus estimated $1,000,000,000.)

Children Outdo Congressmen On Broadcast

Something came out of Congress yesterday not having to do with preparations for war.

More than a score of children of Congressmen broadcast to the Nation, and if children repeat what their parents say at home then . . .

Certain Congressmen say that Iowa is the best State, that Washington State is the best, certainly "the favorite of all the West," and sing such songs as "Home on the Range" and "Old Folks at Home."

The broadcast, made over the N. B. C. blue network, went through without a single slip of tongue or the forgetting of a line, a record Congress itself was said not to have equaled.

Praising Iowa's crops and per capita wealth was Mary Gwynne, 12, daughter of Representative John W. Gwynne (Republican), of Iowa. Praising Washington State was Marian Smith, 9, daughter of Representative Martin F. Smith (Democrat), Washington. Jesse Wolcott, 11 daughter of Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, sang "Home on the Range." Charles Izac, 16, son of Representative Ed V. Izac (Democrat), of California, did a clarinet solo of "Old Folks at Home," and Bobby Dies, 13, son of Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, didn't show up to play a scheduled saxophone solo. A mandolin duet was given by James Edgar Byron and Goodloe Byron, sons of the late Representative William D. Byron, of Maryland.

Others participating were Doralyn Cartwright, Wilburta Cartwright, Nancy Clark and Helen Clark, Roger Cooley, Calvin Dworshak, Mark Gillette, Emma Mae Hook, Janelle Johnson, Mary Louise Lee, Daphne Mahon, Patsy Patrick, Margaret Smith, Bill Tenerowicz, Margaret Truman and Martin Vorys. The broadcast was from the Carlton Hotel. The children got ice cream and cake when it was over.

thinks a circus is taking place."

Every member of the metal trades council, except the machinists' representative, attended the meeting.

The machinists struck on May 10, interrupting work on 60 vessels for the defense program and throwing approximately 15,000 men out of work.

Frey said that neither the Army nor the Navy would take any steps in the return to work movement.

"We don't need armed forces. We'll go through the lines ourselves and reopen the plants."

A spokesman said the Navy was cooperating "in any way we can be of assistance." He added that the Navy had never discussed the use of armed forces in reopening the shipyards.

The council's decision, Frey said, in no way affects the situation at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. plant, which refused to sign the recent master agreement designed to stabilize wages and working conditions in West Coast shipyards.

Bethlehem and council officials are to meet Tuesday to start negotiations for a working contract. A council member said Bethlehem would be asked to sign the master agreement immediately.

The agreement provides that machinists be given a wage increase from $1 to $1.12 an hour and that they be paid time and a half for overtime. The machinists demanded $1.15 an hour and double time for overtime. They have been getting double time for many years and contend that to accept time and a half would mean sacrificing hard-earned gains.

The Defense Mediation Board reported yesterday that its efforts to date had ended or postponed strikes involving more than 600,000 armament workers.

Since it received its first case on March 27, the board said in a progress report, 628,833 men have returned to defense jobs or have deferred strikes at the request of the agency. Its statement was prepared before settlement of another dispute Saturday night involving 1,150 workers in the Laporte, Ind., plant of Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co.

At San Francisco, A. F. L. and C. I. O. machinists whose strike has held up production on $500,000,000 of defense contracts, agreed at the request of Gov. Culbert Olson to vote Tuesday night on the question of ending the walkout.

The strike of 1,700 machinists has affected about 15,000 workers. The machinists had rejected a coastwide master agreement which international officers had signed. The machinists asked that their $1 an hour rate be raised to $1.15 with retention of a double time for overtime.

Down on the Gulf Coast, the Right Rev. Peter M. H. Wynhoven, chairman of a conference of Federal, labor and shipyard officials announced a tentative agreement on a no-strike, no-lockout understanding. A meeting at New Orleans Tuesday will consider other provisions in the proposed agreement.

her influence may have behind that peace gesture.

On the other hand, if the President decides not to make a peace gesture but to back Britain, for years if necessary, against the Axis, then France will fulfill her new pledge to collaborate fully—except militarily—with the Axis and will aid Germany in organizing the continent to insure a maximum production of food and industrial products.

French observers consider Mr. Roosevelt and the Pope the only two personalities qualified to play the role of mediator.

If Mr. Roosevelt refrains from offering himself as a mediator, French observers are convinced there will be a spirited drive by the Axis powers during the next six months on both Suez and Gibraltar.

many cities. The Solicitor General spoke at a mass gathering in the Departmental Auditorium last night.

Record crowds turned out to hear the speakers in cities throughout the country. Approximately 750,000 persons attended the New York gathering addressed by Secretary Ickes—the largest gathering in the city's history, police said.

In Chicago, 125,000 persons jammed Soldier Field to hear Knudsen's speech and to witness a patriotic show staged by a galaxy of motion picture and other entertainment stars. In Boston, a comparable crowd turned out at Charles River Esplanade for patriotic exercises. Senator David I. Walsh, a native American statesman, and Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, world famous musician who recently acquired citizenship, highlighted the celebration.

Those seized "have been in the main either visitors of uncertain purpose, who have overstayed permits, or seamen," the Attorney General said in a broadcast over the Mutual network.

"What has happened abroad teaches us to scrutinize with care 'tourists' and recent arrivals of uncertain antecedents," he said.

Attorney General Jackson told recently naturalized citizens they "can be of immediate service to their adopted country by aiding in the efforts to persuade non-citizen groups that their self-interest dictates loyalty to this country.

Youth's Role Stressed

"We look to them," he said, "to be ambassadors of Americanism to the foreign born in our population who have not become citizens."

Celebration of the citizenship day in Washington was climaxed last night with a program sponsored by the Americanization School Association in the Departmental Auditorium.

Youth's role in good citizenship was stressed by Solicitor General Francis Biddle who declared that against the personification of youth by democracy has come "the revolt of the arrogance of race" by the totalitarian powers.

"Our public are not any longer divided on the gravity of the issues that confront us, even if but a long year ago we went about our accustomed businesses, certain that the storm was still a long way from our shores," he said.

"Tyranny is very old; democracy is as young as our national life. There can be no understanding between the two.

"If England falls, does Lindbergh think that we alone can carry the torch? The new Europe will then stand strongly on the ruthless discipline of a single political party, unopposed, confirmed by mock elections, working its will through star-chamber trials, the pervasion of the Gestapo, torture, concentration camps and secret murder.

Is it with that Europe which Lindbergh and his supporters counsels us to make peace and resume the open channels of friendly trade? . . . We can not live in such a world."

Should England fall, he said, "We would then be forced to arm increasingly beyond a point where any thought of liberal peace could enter."

Col. Delano Participates

Taking part in the program were Col. Frederic A. Delano, president of the Americanization School Association of the District; Mrs. William H. Pouch, president General of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Commissioner John Russell Young; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the District Board of Education, and Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, State regent of the District D. A. R. Music was furnished by the United States Marine Band Orchestra and the men's glee club of Wilson Teachers College.

In a citizenship day address broadcast to the Nation over the Columbia Broadcasting System Vice President Wallace declared:

"Today the idea for Pan Americanism has become so strong that we look on the word 'American' as denoting citizenship not merely in a particular nation, but also citizenship in the entire hemisphere.

"To an increasing extent I hope the citizens of Mexico, Brazil, Argentina and all of Latin America, as well as the United States, will look on themselves as having in addition to their national citizenship a super citizenship in America, the hemisphere where nations earnestly try to settle their disputes peacefully without lying, treaty breaking or aggression.

Speaking on the same program with the Vice President, House Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, warned that "no people remain free who are not willing to make sacrifices when the occasion demands.

"America will live!" he exclaimed. "I say away with unnecessary fear and defeatism. We must and shall win through. We must awaken to the dangers that now or may beset us."

At Soldier's Field, in Chicago, OPM Director General William S. Knudsen, who came to this country from Denmark 41 years ago, said Americans "must give all we have" to aid a British victory.

"American industry has never failed the American Nation and it is not failing her now. Soon we will have this great industrial machine of ours turning out material in a quantity that will make us able to defend our shores and help others who are in need," he said.

Jews, Serb Prisoners Forced To Clean Up Belgrade's Debris

Leon Kay was the last American correspondent to leave Yugoslavia. He arrived in Budapest aboard a Danube steamer with 27 other Americans Sunday.

By Leon Kay

United Press Staff Writer

Budapest, May 18.—Jews and Serbian prisoners of war have been mobilized into work gangs in Belgrade by the German authorities to clear away the debris of one-fifth of the city's buildings destroyed by German aerial bombardments.

The city was rapidly resuming normal life when I left it Friday morning and public services were being reestablished as fast as repairs can be made.

There is no longer any serious food shortage except for flour and bread.

During an extensive tour of the German and Italian occupied areas of Yugoslavia I neither saw nor heard of any resistance being made against the troops of occupation.

I traveled to the Adriatic coast near the Albanian frontier and back through the German and Italian areas to Belgrade but found no disorders.

Any Serbian troops which may have escaped into the mountains in the south apparently are in hiding and are not resorting to guerrilla warfare.

I arrived in Belgrade tonight aboard a specially chartered Danube River steamer bringing 27 other American citizens from Belgrade, including nine women and four children.

Aboard the steamer, chartered by the American legation in Belgrade because no other means of transport were to be had, were United States Minister Arthur Bliss Lane and Mrs. Lane, who are en route to the United States.

Also aboard were United States Consul General Robert Macatee and five other American Legation staff members, either en route to the United States or to other posts.

The vessel also carried several South American diplomats and consular officials, including Brazilian Minister Carlo A. de Souza; Miranda Pacheco, secretary of the Brazilian Legation in Belgrade, and his wife; Leon B. Jonathan, chancellor of the Brazilian Legation, and his wife; Argentine Charge d'Affaires Alberto Vignes and his wife. All are en route to South America by way of Lisbon.

Awards Given As B.P.W. Ends Va. Parley

Charlottesville, Va., May 18.—Announcement was made at the annual banquet, closing event of the two-day convention of the Virginia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., of awards won last year.

The emblem award was presented by Mrs. Anne Percy Middleton to the Charlottesville club. The Staunton club received the plaque for the largest membership growth. The Bedford club was second, while the Roanoke and Suffolk clubs tied for third place. The publicity award went to the Norfolk club, and the Charlottesville and Roanoke clubs received honorable mention.

The following delegates were elected to the annual convention of the national federation, to be held in Los Angeles in July: Mrs. Elizabeth Hill Beard, Charlottesville; Mrs. Hilda M. Traina, Hopewell; Mrs. Nina Bell Avery, Richmond; Miss Birdie Dodson, Portsmouth; and Miss Alice Krebbs, Lynchburg.

The convention went on record as indorsing all the support program of the National Federation, as outlined in the March issue of "Independent Woman," except that which recommends deletion of the national federation's support to Federal aid for education, and the inclusion of a Federal Department of Education with a secretary in the President's Cabinet.

The Virginia federation recommended to the national federation that it support broader application of the Social Security laws.

Another resolution requests the State superintendent of public instruction to include as part of the regular school curriculum a course of health instruction for all high school pupils. Passage also was urged of an adequate drug and cosmetics law by the Virginia Assembly to parallel as far as possible the national law.

Other resolutions adopted indorsed extension and improvement of a merit system for State employes on similar lines to the United States Civil Service; and opposing all class legislation, such as veterans preference bills, etc., as undemocratic and unconstitutional.

The federation reaffirmed its approval of the Child Labor amendment.

Justice Pecora stated that the organization is aimed to counter Axis activities, both here and abroad "and to encourage prompt and decisive action for the preservation of freedom."

Conclave to Act On Diet of Low Wage-Earner

A national food stamp plan applicable to all families in the United States receiving incomes of less than $1,000 a year is to be considered at the National Nutrition Conference for Defense, called by President Roosevelt to be held here May 26-28.

Federal Security Administrator McNutt, in the announcement, warned that current rising employment and higher wages will not be sufficient to have any pronounced effect on widespread undernourishment in this country either this year or next."

He said the conference will face the question of "how to bridge the gap quickly between low incomes and nutritionally adequate diets."

"How can we expect to step up production of airplanes, munitions and ships," he said, "if we do not step up the health and general fitness of the workers who make production possible? We cannot expect to have workers who are physically fit unless we see to it that they have adequate diets."

McNutt declared that "three-fourths of the United States are now getting along on diets considered poor or only fair."

Throughout the country, he added, "at least 45,000,000 persons have inadequate diets primarily because their incomes are so low they cannot afford to buy sufficient quantities of dairy products, leafy vegetables and other vitamin-rich foods."

The food stamp plan presumably would follow the pattern in the relief setup, under which relief clients, for each $1 in food stamps purchased are given $2 in stamps good for purchase of surplus food commodities.

McNutt estimated that the plan for the less-than-$1,000-income families would cost $500,000,000 and would benefit from 20,000,000 to 22,000,000 persons as well as the farmers whose produce would be purchased.

Children Give $6,000 To Missions

More than $6,000 representing the nickels, dimes and pennies of hundreds of Episcopal children—was symbolically presented at the altar of the Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon. The actual money had been collected in the several parishes previously.

Annual Lenten offering service of the Washington Diocese, it drew about 2,800 laymen and clergy from fifty parishes. They included 1,050 singers from junior choirs and the parish delegates who marched in a colorful procession through the edifice. The choristers filled the Great Choir and overflowed into the Crossing.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, in his sermon drew a parallel between the parable of the five barley loaves and two fishes that fed 5,000 and the small contributions. Multiplied, they maintained vast mission enterprises, he pointed out.

Each parish delegate marched to the altar and presented a slip bearing the amount of the contribution. Most of the actual cash is being sent to the National Council of the Episcopal Church for foreign and home mission support.

Assisting in the services were the Rev. E. B. Harris and the Rev. Walter Archbold, deans of the Northern and Southern Convocations, respectively, and the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Dean of Washington.

Police Identify Man Found Dead Near B. & O. Tracks

Prince Georges County, Md., police yesterday tentatively identified as Joseph Frank Herbert, about 40, handyman, of 304 E Street Northwest, the man whose body was found yesterday morning beside the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks near Bladensburg Road and Eastern Avenue.

Herbert was identified by a Unemployment Commission identification card found near his body.

A Baltimore & Ohio engineer noticed the body lying along side the tracks about 150 feet north of the District Line and notified Union Station. Dr. James I. Boyd, county medical examiner, and Detective Charles N. Thomsen, of the county homicide squad, said that apparently the man had been killed by a fall from a train. His chest was crushed and back broken.

The body was removed to Gasch's funeral home, 46 Maryland Avenue, Bladensburg, Md.

350 Students March in May Procession

Three hundred and fifty students of St. Michael's Parochial School, Silver Spring, participated yesterday in the annual May procession and crowning of the shrine of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Marching from the school on Wayne Avenue, thence along Cedar Avenue and Pershing Drive, the procession ended on the grounds of the Academy of the Holy Names.

Three eighth-grade boys, James Skinner, cross bearer, and Thomas Taggart and Billie Victory, acolytes, led the march. Following was a large group of sanctuary boys dressed in red cassocks and white surplices.

Dorothy Schweinhaut, who has won a four-year scholarship to the Academy of the Holy Names, was the May Queen. Attired in a long white dress and blue satin cape she carried a bouquet of pink roses. A lace coronet held in place her long veil of net which fell over her cape.

Her 18 attendants included two students from every class. In the group were Peggy Mahaney, Paulina Labofish, Rose Marie Winslow, Theresa Quirk, Jean Tuhy, Margaret Peake, Louise Labofish, Barbara Leonard, Joan Turner, Jean Powers, Anne Herzig, Mary Kennedy, Susan Thompson and Margo Wrathall. The first two girls wore long pastel pink dresses, while the others were in white gowns, all carrying sheaths of pink and white carnations.

Nancy Anne McKay and Claire Casey, both 4 years' old, wearing long white dresses, flowers in their hair and carrying old-fashioned nosegays, were the flower girls. Five-year-old Joseph Brown was the crown bearer, and Joseph King and Francis Sullivan, also of pre-school age, were train bearers.

Honor boys, who carried banners before each of their classes, were Irvin Burns, Thomas Keelan, John Gott, Robert Coughlan, Larry McKim, Thomas Maloney, Thomas Latimer and Francis Pelland. Fifty-nine first communicants, who were received at the 8 o'clock mass, also participated.

After the May Queen crowned the Shrine of the Blessed Mother sheltered among tall trees and shrubs, the court placed their flowers at the foot of the image of Mary.

The Rev. Thomas A. Calnan, pastor, celebrated benediction before an outdoor altar on the porch of the Academy building. Hymns were sung by the senior choir under the direction of Miss Mary Keane.

National P-TA Maps U.S. Fund Control Plan

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 18.—Means of keeping "out of politics" the distribution of Federal funds for equalizing educational opportunities throughout the United States were proposed today by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The program was adopted by the board of managers at the opening of the congress' forty-fifth convention after its president, Mrs. William Kletzer, of Portland, Oreg., declared:

"There can be no program of total defense in America without total education. We cannot successfully defend our country by fortifying only one border; neither can we preserve our democracy by educating only part of our children."

The congress' directors reaffirmed its long-standing position favoring Federal aid, but amended its legislative program to include these suggestions for the distribution of funds by the Federal Government:

Appointment of an independent bipartisan commission solely responsible to the Congress of the United States for the apportionment of money to the States;

Distribution on a basis of need, such need to be determined on the "basis of established facts which shall serve as the foundation for a specific formula for apportionment."

Schlesinger Studio Closed in Dispute With A.F.L. Guild

Hollywood, May 18 (AP).—Leon Schlesinger, maker of movie cartoons, closed his studio in a dispute today with the A. F. of L. Screen Cartoonists' Guild, on the eve of a National Labor Relations Board hearing into labor conditions at Walt Disney Studio.

Schlesinger's attorney, Harry G. Sadicoff, issued a statement saying Schlesinger had agreed to many requests of the employes made last December, but since "as a result of outside influences the monetary demands were increased about 300 per cent."

Sadicoff said about 200 employes are involved. Pay ranges from $25 to $200 per week, but he said it would be impossible to give a clear picture of union demands because of involved classifications.

The statement said the studio would remain closed so long as the union makes demands . . . impossible of fulfillment," and added that a union ultimatum had threatened a strike call at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Voorhis to Offer Bill to Let Valtin Be Citizen

A bill to permit Jan Valtin, author of "Out of the Night," to become a naturalized citizen will be introduced in the House today by Representative H. Jerry Voorhis Democrat), of California.

Valtin, a German-born fugitive from both the Nazi Gestapo and the Soviet O. G. P. U., is now in danger of being deported on the basis of what he told about himself in his book.

Representative Voorhis, a New Dealer and a member of the Dies Committee, feels that Valtin is too valuable to deport. Already, Voorhis says, Valtin has given valuable testimony with regard to Fifth Columnists in this country, and he is in a position to give more.

Filipino Assembly Acts to Authorize Bill for U. S. Loan

Manila, May 18 (AP).—A measure which would empower President Manuel Quezon to negotiate for a loan of $200,000,000 from the Export-Import Bank was approved last night by the Philippine Assembly ways and means committee.

The money would be used to finance purchase from the United States materials to meet the islands' requirements of food, clothing, medicines and construction material for one year.

It also would be used in part to increase monetary reserves in the exchange standard fund in order to safeguard the parity of the Philippine peso with the dollar.

Weizmann Asks Britain to Arm Palestine Jews

New York, May 18 (AP).—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the Jewish agency for Palestine and of the World Zionist organization, urged today that the British government provide arms to Jews in Palestine. Dr. Weizmann said at services in Free Synagogue in Carnegie Hall:

"In this solemn hour we expect the British government to perform an elementary duty of permitting all Jews in Palestine to bear arms so that they can defend themselves in a hostile world and do their share as the last island of democracy in the Battle of the Mediterranean."

He said that 10,000 Jews were enrolled with the British forces in North Africa and Palestine and 40,000 more were available for a Jewish military force.

RIVIERA SUMMER BEGINS. The Lounge Riviera will celebrate its "formal summer opening" on Wednesday. Pete Macias and his cohort of rhythm experts will be on their toes with fresh musical tid-bits and Ida Clark's organ will resound request numbers by the dozen. And you can lay Whirlaway odds that 90 per cent of our town's junior socialites will be at the party . . . Weather will not figure in the Riviera fiesta. For the management is rolling its own weather. The most modern air conditioning has been installed in the spot's spacious annex to supplement the regular aerating of the main room. Come heat waves, wet spells or thunderstorms, every evening will be cloudless and perfect in Riviera.

Nina Blanco, sunny Pan-American singer, will debut in the Madrilion this evening. She replaces Fantasia, originally booked, who has been ordered home to Cuba for a long rest by New York physicians.

"TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES," the crazy forfeit game of years ago, will be played by both bandsmen and customers in Jack Coffey's floor show in the Wardman Park Metronome Room this week. Some people, we have an idea are going to wind up turning somersaults or trying to tap dance. Tipsy Waller, the Coffey comedian, has a new specialty, "The Pig Got Up." Whether the pig contemptuously walks away or sits down and has another—that's something we can't tell you. Beverly Blayne's "Memory Song" this week will be "The Man I Love."

TWO NEW FACES at Ciro's Famous Village are those of Evelyn Scott, charming violinist who's played at several niteries around town, and Texas, who now presides at the piano and solovox. Mayor Ciro continues to play the French horn inimitably and Cecelia Osso flashes black eyes and blue notes.

"MISS WASHINGTON" will be selected from a rare line-up of competitors on the S. S. Mount Vernon next Sunday night. Among them will be Beverly Stull, of Burt's Trans-Lux; Bunny Knupp, who's already the Reciprocity Club's "Miss Reciprocity;" red-curled Arlene Peck; Christine Macdonald, who was 1940's "Miss Energy," and Marilyn Makin, a whistling cutie. If any of you pretty ones would like to enter, get in touch with the Wilson Line or Al Stern at the National Press Club.

Gene Archer, big and jovial and one of the best barytones hereabouts, will return to the Shoreham tonight. During the summer you'll also be hearing Gene three times a week over the morning radio.

JUNGLE RHYTHM will beat at the Casino Royal this week. A throbbing La Conga and primitive jungle dances are both on the books for the agile Clair Rae dancers. Newcomers in the C. R. revue will be Spencer and Forman, high-speed tap steppers, and George Wanger, one of the nimbler and more diverting jugglers.

GLEN ECHO FLASHES. Johnny Zurro's back in Paul Kain's band. The Army doctors made big eyes when they discovered a crick in his back . . . Dick Leith first tooted the trombone in the Central High School band. Pianist Ken Foy collects cigarette coupons, expects to get a card table in 1946.

FACES ROUND PLACES. Mayflower Lounge. A crowd of the horsy set right from the Washington Horse Show. Head lady was Liz Whitney, whose First Night topped 'em all as a jumper . . . Mayfair. Bill Chew, radio engineer for the Kibitzers, enjoying his usual colossal Sattiday afternoon . . . Anchor Room. Lew Salmon, last seen here with Joe Penner and later with "Lady in the Dark," but now in uniform. At Eileen George's behest, Lew sang "Amopola," received an ovation . . . Lotus. Tony Gaudio, the Troika's star drummer, done up handsomely in a tan sports outfit. Publicist Jim Walter eating chow mein with one eye on the booful Mayfair girls. Impresario Leon Brusiloff.

PETE MACIAS, who'll play fancy tunes at Lounge Riviera's "formal summer opening" Wednesday

Guido, darkly goodlooking young psychoanalyst of the Rainbow Room, is an expert on the human mind, but he's completely baffled by his new Eskimo spitz puppy. "That pup is absolutely unpredictable," he says.

DRESSED-UP MELODY must have much to do with the constantly crowded state of the Neptune Room. All numbers pianoed by those delightful people, Bob and Bertie Hellman, have the "big time" quality that signalized their recent two-week appearance at the Earle Theater . . . And Joe Collins and his Mad Hatters put so many frills and trimmings on every number that it seems new even if you've heard it a hundred times.

FROM IOWA TO PARIS. Hal Yates, new singing pianist in the Carlton cocktail lounge, was born in Iowa, reared in Minnesota and won his first radio contest in Chicago. After that he was soon booked for Europe, where he appeared successfully in London, Paris and other large centers.

DATES TO REMEMBER. The Troika closing on next Saturday night. It's always one of the year's biggest parties, worth going a hundred miles to attend . . . The opening of the Starlight Roof on May 29 with Dick Wilson and his Society Orchestra. This alluring event isn't far off now . . . The elegant Pall Mall Room will close about the middle of June. Which will mean a temporary ending of your opportunity to enjoy Bert Bernath's smoothie music and the caperings of the Arthur Murray dancers . . . Paul Young's may or may not close on June 9, when dynamic Jerry and Turk end their engagement. It all depends on whether Paul is able to book a thunderous act he has in mind.

El Hai's Manager Oscar was recently denuded of every one of his wisdom teeth, says wistfully that he hopes they're not correctly named.

CONTRASTS IN MUSIC MAKING. Nick Hope's magical accordioning of "Dance of the Hours" at the Silver Fox . . . Don Taylor's hot rhythm in the Pan-American manner at Restaurant "823" . . . The wild harmonies of "Turkish Fantasy" as violined by Michel at the Plymouth . . . The lowdown blues of "Sorry For Myself" when sung at Kavodas' Grill by Nell Deacon.

Sackett Dies; Ex-Senator Of Kentucky

Frederic Moseley Sackett, jr., 72, former Senator from Kentucky and one-time Ambassador to Germany, died of a heart attack yesterday in Baltimore, where he was visiting his wife, who is convalescing from a recent eye operation.

Sackett was born in Providence, R. I., and was a graduate of Brown and Harvard Universities. For a short time after receiving his bachelor of laws degree from Harvard, he practiced in Ohio, later moving to Louisville, where he made his home until the time of his death.

From the turn of the century until 1924, Sackett played a prominent role in Kentucky politics. He served, meanwhile, as president of a number of public utilities, including the Louisville Gas Co. and the Louisville Light Co. He was also associated with the coal business, and at different times headed four different Kentucky coal firms. It was as a coal and cement magnate that Sackett made much of his personal fortune.

During the war Sackett was food administrator for Kentucky, and it was while in this office that he met Herbert Hoover, and began what was to be a long and close friendship.

He was appointed director of the Louisville branch of the Federal Reserve Bank at the time of its organization, and remained in that position until 1924, when he was elected to the United States Senate in the Republican landslide of that year.

After Hoover's inauguration as President, the Senator from Kentucky became a powerful figure in Washington, and was one of Hoover's confidential advisers. At the outset of the Hoover administration, Senator Sackett was made chairman of the Senate Steering Committee.

In 1930, Sackett accepted President Hoover's appointment as Ambassador to Germany. While in Berlin he witnessed the rise to power of Adolf Hitler and his Nazi party. In 1933, shortly after the New Deal was ushered in, Sackett resigned his post, and virtually retired from politics, devoting himself to his many business interests in Louisville.

Since his return to private life, the former Senator figured in the headlines only once. That was when his wife's niece, Mrs. Berry V. Stoll, was kidnaped and held for $50,000 ransom. The ransom was paid, and Mrs. Stoll found, unharmed, in an Indianapolis apartment house. A short time later the kidnaper was captured in California, and is now serving a life sentence.

Sackett leaves his wife, the former Miss Olive Reed, daughter of one of Kentucky's wealthiest families. The Sacketts had recently celebrated their forty-third wedding anniversary.

'Hot Suspect' Held in Shotgun Slaying of 5 in Farm Family

By the Associated Press

Lawrenceburg, Ind., May 18.—Sheriff William Winegard announced today he had seized a 26-year-old man as a "hot suspect" for questioning in the shotgun slaying of five members of a back country farm family.

"This man," said Sheriff Winegard, "has been telling us so many conflicting stories that I think he will help us out if he really talks."

The victims, whose bodies were found Saturday scattered over a quarter mile radius in and near their Laughry Creek home, 14 miles southwest of here were John ston Agrue, 60, an employe of the Jefferson Ordnance Proving Grounds at Madison, Ind.; his wife, Nina, 60; their granddaughter, Mary Elizabeth Breeden 12; and two sons, Leo 24 and William 30.

Extra Plate At Table

An extra plate on the farmhouse supper table started authorities on a search for the unknown guest and Wingard said a neighbor, Carl Elliott, reported he saw the young suspect in the vicinity about 1:30 p. m. Friday. The sheriff said he then found a truck driver who took the youth to the neighborhood.

The elder Argue refused the suspect a loan last April 22, according to a note to the Sheriff received from a person whose name he withheld.

Winegard said the suspect denied being in the neighborhood Friday but gave an unsatisfactory account of his whereabouts.

Neighbors Investigate

A team of horses which had been left hitched overnight to a corn-planter caused Harvey Sellers and his son, William, neighbors, to investigate and they found the body of the elder Agrue in a lane and that of the granddaughter inside a barn.

The men called the Sheriff's office and deputy Arch Voit found Mrs. Agrue's body in the kitchen. The officer threw a tear gas bomb into the house before entering, on the chance the killer might be lurking there.

Leo Agrue's collie pup led searchers to the brothers' bodies. The corpses lying outdoors were soaked by a heavy rain which fell early Friday night.

A 12-gauge shotgun that had been kept in the Agrue house was missing.

'Mexican Night' Fete

The Pan American Club of the Central Young Men's Christian Association will present "Mexican Night" at 8:15 p. m. today in the Y. M. C. A. building, 1736 G Street Northwest. Don Eugenio de Anzoreno, Mexican Embassy attache, will speak.

Business Men to Meet

The monthly dinner meeting of the Connecticut Avenue Business Men's Association will be held tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at the Hay-Adams Hotel. Tickets are $1.50 per person, payable at the table.

Watchmakers to Discuss How U. S. Can Beat Hitler's Time

Germany, it appears, is timing its blitzkriegs by Swiss watches.

They're pretty good clock men but have relied traditionally on the Swiss for their pocket timepieces and maybe sometime will have to check the time of day against watches made and adjusted by America's ranking craftsmen—the Horological Institute of America.

The institute members, opening the twenty-first annual meeting at the National Academy of Science Building, Twenty-first Street and Constitution Avenue, at 10 a. m. today, are ready to set the clocks and keep them running for national defense, officers said yesterday at an advance committee meeting.

The meeting, scheduled for 2:30 p. m., began at 3:05 p. m., but the members' watches weren't responsible for it. It was just an old American custom.

"The Watchmakers' Position in the Defense Program" will be discussed by James C. O'Brien, executive officer, national roster of scientific and specialized personnel, at 2 p. m. today. The sessions will continue through tomorrow.

Howard L. Beehler, Lancaster, Pa., is president; Frank D. Urie, Elgin, Ill., is first vice president; Paul Moore, Washington, is executive secretary, and Ralph E. Gould, Washington, is corresponding secretary.

'Palestine'—Lecture Topic

Dr. Charles E. Resser will give an illustrated lecture on "Palestine" tonight at 8 o'clock at the monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association at Anacostia Methodist Church, Fourteenth and U Streets Southeast. He is president of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association and paleontologist of the Smithsonian Institution.

The Golden Page and King classes of Anacostia Methodist Church will be hosts.

A Hill-Billy Comedy

"Moonshine and Honeysuckle," two-act hill-billy comedy, will be presented in the church school auditorium of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, tomorrow, Wednesday and Friday at 8:15 p. m.

The cast will include Edward P. Mangum, Francis Hay, Arden Raha, Glover Chapman, Juanita Hill, Mary Mangum, Martin Brock, Peggy Bleth, Bunny Crum, Rocky McCann, Howard Gossage, Thelma Conrad and Lorn Hutton.

Let's stop this talk about Aid to Britain!

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has expressed himself in no uncertain terms—he's for aid to Britain.

Willkie is urging the same policy.

But Senator Wheeler says he's for aid to Britain too. At least he says so.

And Hoover urges aid to Britain.

Yet common sense tells us these men don't agree. They're as far apart as the poles, although they use the same words.

There is confusion in such words—confusion which affects the American citizen who is honestly trying to make up his mind. He wants to know: "What is the best way to defend America? What is in the best interests of the American people and American democratic institutions?"

Therefore we say: Let's stop this talk about aid to Britain.

Let us talk about aid to America. Because, in the words of President Roosevelt, "Never before since Jamestown and Plymouth Rock has our American Civilization been in such danger as now."

The world is shrinking. Greenland and Iceland suddenly come into our back yard. The Azores and the Cape Verde Islands become vital to our defense. Defense against whom? Hitler, of course—Hitler, who hates democracy and has vowed to exterminate it.

How shall we aid America? What is in the best interests of the American people? Viewed from this angle, there can be only one honest and wise answer:

Convoys Now!

That's not sentiment! It's sense! It happens to be the only way we can keep the crushing heels of aggression off American soil. True, it might mean shooting. Not necessarily, but there's a very good chance. But no matter what we do, we can have no assurance of staying out of war. We just no longer live in that kind of world. When Hitler in a speech on December 10, 1940, said: "Two worlds are in conflict, two philosophies of life . . . one of these two worlds must break asunder," he told us what to expect from him.

Unless we convoy now, England cannot win. That's not exaggeration, it's the measured opinion of seventeen of the country's leading military, naval and aeronautical experts. To quote their official statement:

"The decisive period is from the present moment until the rising curve of American production passes that of German . . . The essential element of British survival and ultimate victory, therefore, is the maintenance of a sufficient flow of shipping across the Atlantic."

British survival and ultimate victory—are they essential to American survival? To the survival of the America we love and cherish—yes. If England goes down, perhaps America wouldn't go down with her. But we would be subjected to slow strangulation. Freedom would die. Labor would be enslaved. Industry would be regimented. Religion would suffer. Most of the things that to any decent American make life worth living would pass from this earth. That is why we say if you really want to be practical, give every ounce of effort to see that the goods are delivered to Britain. Remember what Willkie said:

"Fellow Americans, there is no compromise—the world will be dominated by free men or it will be dominated by enslaved men. We cannot appease the forces of evil. We cannot make peace with those who seek to destroy our very way of life. For the differences between us are fundamental."

Our Growing Capital

We thoroughly agree with Chairman Delano of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission that "it is now an appropriate time to reconsider the setup" of that agency. Washington is growing at a phenomenal rate. In too many instances that development does not conform to sound principles of city planning. In some instances the advice of the NCPPC is ignored; in other cases Government buildings are planned and erected without so much as asking the advice of this central planning agency. So the relationship between the NCPPC and other branches of the Government may well be carefully reviewed.

Presumably the study to be made by the Budget Bureau at the President's request will be chiefly concerned with the organization of the commission itself. Mr. Delano, who has agreed to postpone his retirement until a reorganization can be effected, points out that the NCPPC is a "cumbersome piece of machinery." If it can be made less cumbersome without losing its representative character, such a change would certainly be constructive. But the commission must necessarily include representatives of many different groups, notably Congress, the National Park Service, the District government and the public. At present the so-called "citizen members," in addition to the chairman, are a city planner, a realtor and an architect. Undoubtedly the commission needs the expert advice which each of these specialists is qualified to give.

Probably the chief of the Forest Service could be dropped from the list without much loss, since Washington has no forests outside of its parks. Nor would the commission be likely to miss the Chief of Engineers of the Army, since the Engineer Corps is represented in any event by the Engineer Commissioner of the District. Because of the pressure of other duties both those officials would doubtless be pleased to relinquish their duties as members of the NCPPC. There is nothing to indicate, however, that Mr. Delano is merely interested in reducing the size of the commission. He points out, for instance, that the NCPPC has no direct tie-in with the Commission of Fine Arts, as, obviously, there should be. That is a patent deficiency which should be remedied in any reorganization of the NCPPC.

More important than any shift of membership, however, is the extension of the commission's powers. Congress ought to require every governmental agency to submit its plans to the NCPPC before purchasing sites or constructing new buildings. In the present rush to provide new office quarters a chaotic situation may easily develop unless one central clearing house for all Government building plans is maintained. If the Budget Bureau survey does not extend to this problem, its scope should be broadened. And its report should go to Congress as well as the President so that appropriate legislation may be initiated.

Trial Balloon

Since Italy was taken over by the German Gestapo, and the Italian press began to take orders from Dr. Goebbels, Rome has more and more come to be used by Germany as a convenient spot from which to float trial balloons. The latest has to do with a prospective rapprochement between Russia and the Axis. Unlike many other trial balloons, however, this one may have considerable substance to it. Indeed, it is possible to suspect that one reason why Joseph Stalin assumed the mantle of the Russian premiership, a post that he does not need except for ceremonial reasons, is to be able to deal directly with Hitler. One may go even further and suspect that circumstances have driven Stalin into accepting, willy-nilly, the role of Russian Gauleiter, even as Mussolini has for some time been forced to play that role in Italy.

In one very important respect, however, Russia's situation is decidedly different from that of Italy. Italy is already an occupied country, like Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and the nations that Hitler has conquered. Russia is still, at least on the surface, master of her own destinies. But the presence along her frontiers of a very large German army capable of driving through the Ukraine to the Caucasus has compelled Stalin to choose between resistance and collaboration. The indications are that he is choosing the latter. The pitifully meager show of opposition to German plans in the Balkans manifested by the Kremlin in recent weeks has given way to ostentatious acts of friendship for the Third Reich. The stage is clearly being set for another German-Russian pact with, perhaps, Turkey and Iran in the unhappy role of burnt offerings.

Paying Labor

Without some kind of a yardstick the word "overdue" is just as inexact as "adequate." But the monthly survey of the American Federation of Labor uses "overdue" without a peg in writing about the wage level. The lift of recent months is said to be "overdue." Based upon what? Certainly it is not overdue in the sense that employed workers have been receiving less for labor than they did in the flush 20's. On the contrary, the Cleveland Trust Co.'s Monthly Bulletin notes that the average pay of factory workers in February was at the highest level since 1920. And it was only 5 per cent below the peak month of the World War period of exceptionally high prices.

This, however, is not the way to write of wage earners' standards. The extent of the gains made by labor can only be realized by making allowance for changes in living costs. Here the National Industrial Conference Board's monthly indices of the cost of living in wage-earning families provides a measuring rod. This index gives a means of correcting indices of monthly earnings so as to determine variations in the real earnings of the workers—that is, the amount of goods, services, etc., that their wages will buy. When earnings are adjusted in this manner, the Cleveland Trust Co. points out that the purchasing power of current earnings of factory workers is 12 per cent above the 1937 peak, 17 per cent higher than in the boom year 1929, and 30 per cent above the 1920 peak. Moreover, these gains have been achieved despite a reduction of about 20 per cent in the average weekly hours of work. Hour for hour the real gains made by labor have thus been even more pronounced than those indicated by the figures for monthly earnings.

Such data should set at rest charges that workers have not benefited from the gains in industrial efficiency achieved since World War I. But the truth will not, of course, make much impression. It will not prevent labor from pressing for further wage increases. Nor will it prevent them from justifying such applications on the ground that industry can afford to pay more as a result of the rising profits resulting from the defense boom. In support of this thesis the A. F. of L. says that many concerns are currently earning profits well above the average of former years. But it is well to remember two things on this subject. One is that a good many other concerns—some of the largest ones, in fact—that have been recently compelled to increase wages are actually earning less today on a greatly expanded volume of business than they did a year ago when the Government and labor were taking a smaller share of their gross incomes. The other is that defense profits are temporary.

Argentine Treaty

Announcement by the State Department of its intention to negotiate a trade agreement with Argentina is of profound political as well as economic significance. Negotiations with Argentina were broken off more than a year ago because of the inability to adjust outstanding differences and agree upon mutually satisfactory concessions. At that time a great many people said "I told you so." For it had been widely predicted that the trade agreement program would strike an immovable barrier when we came to bargain with a country like Argentina whose chief exports offer competition to our agricultural products.

However, the obstacles to an accord which loomed so large a year ago seem less formidable today. And for several reasons. The war in Europe has resulted in the piling up of large agricultural surpluses in Argentina. This has increased the attractiveness of the United States market to that country. War and limited shipping space have also prevented the delivery of essential manufactured goods from Britain. And this is a development that has disposed Argentina to modify restrictive exchange control policies which have drastically reduced purchases of United States goods. On our side our own defense program has opened up new outlets for Argentina's exports. The extent of our widening market is indicated by a 53 per cent increase in shipments to the United States during the first quarter of this year over the same period of 1940. Furthermore, we are improving our trade still further by our loan policy. The United States Government has made loans in excess of $100,000,000 to Argentina to support exchange and help finance purchases of our products. Finally, in any participation in economic warfare on Germany, we might at any time join with Britain in buying up Argentine products, so as to prevent them from being absorbed by Germany.

Argentina will supply a very important missing link in the chain of trade agreements designed to bring this country into closer and more friendly economic relationships with the countries of the Western Hemisphere. And its inclusion in the circle of trade agreement countries would "chalk up" another victory for the Department of State in its struggle against totalitarian methods of trade penetration in which the chief gains go to the politically stronger bargaining country.

Jail Space

The living space, or lebensraum, which was Karl Haushofer's contribution to Hitler's ideology seems to have diminished to the confines of a jail for its prophet. Haushofer was an intimate of Rudolf Hess, and suspicion that he may have been party to Hess' flight is said to have been responsible for his incarceration. This would merely rob the Nazi movement of one who has already done his work for Hitler. It was an important work, too. Haushofer gave a mighty impetus to Germans' discontent by selling them a bogus grievance that they hadn't enough territory for their livelihood, let alone their destiny. The grievance took a deep and abiding root, and paved the way, along with a rehash of Gobineau's racism, for the elevation of Hitler as the German messiah.

Haushofer was a soldier with scholarly leanings before he became a prophet. In World War I he attained the rank of major general, and it was while serving at the front that he met Hess. Hess became his aide-de-camp, and later his student, for Haushofer took up a professorship at Munich when the war was over. His subject was geopolitics. This was not just political geography to a general who was smarting under Germany's defeat. To Haushofer it was a science by which the material needs of each particular state may be diagnosed and its proper space and situation determined. Once the prescription was found, that became the true lebensraum of the state. Since the science, however, is based upon continued growth lest the state should perish, geopolitics also became the rationale for world control. Haushofer, indeed, saw Germany's mission in the far corners of the earth, particularly in the Pacific.

The diligent Hess took copious notes on geopolitics as taught by his friend Haushofer. These he took with him to the beer hall at Munich where in the evenings the original group of Nazis under Hitler planned their coups. Thus Hitler, eager for ideology to deck out his dreams, came to know the former general, eventually made him one of his chief advisers on foreign policy, and launched the cry of lebensraum on a receptive Germany. Plain facts couldn't undermine the appeal of this intellectualized thirst for conquest—even the ones available in a penny almanac. German population density of 370 to the square mile was considerably lower than the Belgian of 706, or the Dutch of 629; and, anyway, trade across the fence is the method whereby we sustain our living standards, not the soil within. Haushofer may now have the leisure to contemplate this truth, though doubtless he will spend his time pondering the ingratitude of princes to the prophets who help them to power.

Aosta Surrenders

The last spark of Italian resistance in East Africa has been snuffed out with the fall of Amba Alagi and the surrender to the British of the beleaguered Italian garrison led by the Duke of Aosta. Thus in a few brief months more than half a century of Italian empire building has been undone. Italy has now been deprived not only of Ethiopia, whose conquest five years ago entailed the sacrifice of much Italian blood and treasure, but also of the pre-Mussolini colonies of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland. And while the British have been taking over the Italian empire in East Africa, Italy herself has been taken over by the Nazis. The consequences of 18 years of Fascist rule are now apparent in the reduction of greater Italy to a cipher.

To the British the mounting seriousness of the struggle now raging in the Eastern Mediterranean will completely overshadow any rejoicing over Aosta's capitulation and the capture of Amba Alagi. However, the campaign in East Africa has not been without its advantages for them. In the first place, they are now in a position to transfer some tens of thousands of troops from Ethiopia to Egypt and Iraq where, because of Vichy's craven surrender to Hitler, they are badly needed. Secondly, the British victory in East Africa, by giving the British complete control of the Red Sea, made it possible for President Roosevelt to permit American ships to bring supplies directly to Britain's fighting forces in the Middle East. The importance of that development is very high. The British had the man power with which to oppose the Axis in that area, but they lacked supplies, and, as Napoleon said, an army that cannot be supplied must perish.

WHEN A TALL DREAM FALLS

Who would think a dream could die
So quietly as this;
A dream so tall it nudged the sky,
A dream so bright it smote the eye?
Who would think a tower of bliss
Could reel against a frown,
And silently come tumbling down?

Who would think it? Yet now I know
That nobody hears a dream.
Nobody hears it break and go;
Nobody hears it crash below.
Nobody sees a gleam.
In a roomful of people, nobody calls:
Nobody warns when a tall dream falls.

Tax-Exempt Bonds

People of wealth have good reason to fear the great tax levies that are immediately ahead. Taxable Federal bonds offer them no encouragement of lightening their load. It would pay the United States Treasury to offer wealthy people special issues of tax exempt United States defense tax anticipation bonds.

Two per cent is a good return on a tax-exempt private investment. Two per cent is also a good return on taxable United States Government bonds. The Treasury should offer as an inducement 4 per cent United States defense tax anticipation bonds. These bonds could be purchased now from the Treasury in one year, two year, three year, four year, five year, etc., maturities. These bonds would carry no interest coupons. They would be redeemable only in payment of Federal taxes at maturity at par. One-year maturities would sell at 96 and be redeemable in payment of Federal taxes at maturity at 100; two-year maturities would sell at 92 and be redeemable in payment of Federal taxes at maturity at 100; three-year maturities at 88, payable at 100; four years at 86; five at 82, etc. All maturities would be exempt from all Federal, State and local taxes.

United States defense tax anticipation bonds would give the wealthy man a break. He could convert other tax-exempt holdings into United States bonds now, when the market is strong and prices are good. It would put over the sale of United States defense bonds with a "bang." It would be a self-liquidating form of public debt. It would get people started buying United States defense bonds when the "Buy a U. S. Bond" habit needs urgent stimulation.

Union Finances

A labor leader of intelligence and ability states there are thousands of labor unions and seems to acquiesce in the statement there are 8,500,000 members in the A. F. L. and C. I. O.

Labor unions for reasons of their own are not incorporated and no provision is made by law for examination of their records and no reports required; consequently the facts about labor union finances are kept from the public and from their members. We have some verified information concerning initiation fees indicating from $25 to $1,200 required to become members in some unions, but no reliable information is given out as to union dues. However, if we are charitable in our own views, we might say the union income from dues and fees is at least $1 per week per member and conclude therefore, in the absence of financial statements, a low estimate of union revenue takes out of the wage earners' pay envelope $8,500,000 weekly or $442,000,000 yearly.

If the vast sums of money flowing into the labor unions bear any relation to the strikes that cause a loss of millions of days of labor in our national defense then a Congressional investigation is imperative. If Congress passed a resolution to investigate the finances of both the A. F. L. and the C. I. O., it would be a reasonable presumption that all strikes would cease before the investigation got under way. Coddling labor has proved that another and a different approach to the problem is now essential.

Between Beetle And Block

In the Battle of the Atlantic, Ireland occupies a place betwixt and between, neither one thing nor the other. This is contrary to traditional Irish history.

De Valera finds himself between the beetle and the block.

Hitler's pounding on industrial Ulster, through shipbuilding Belfast brought prompt and generous aid from the south to quench the bitter fires of war. While not as important as its neighbor Glasgow for production of ships Belfast is a sizable port worthy the vicious fire of the Nazis.

One of the reasons alleged by De Valera for his failure to join the British in fighting Hitler, is that such action on his part would at once challenge the Nazis to attack by air, Dublin, Limerick and other cities of no military significance.

Few of us believe that Hitler would expend any force in making an attack on cities without military value. The prompt response from the south to smother the Nazi blazes and bind the wounds of the Belfast injured again demonstrates the truth of the old adage "blood is thicker than water." All Hibernian Nights Entertainments from now on will toast the brave defenders of Ulster and bless the men of the south for their heartful help in the hour of need.

Political conventions may have their planks and platforms, ideas of a day, while the spontaneous action of a community recently shown in Belfast will live in the hearts of a people for a full generation.

Unconsciously perhaps, Eire made a stronger appeal for American relief of food stortage by her generous conduct toward Ulster than by sending over an emissary not entirely tactful in his conduct while touring our country.

The lend-lease bill gives the President power to help nations fighting the battle of democracy. It cannot be that Ireland will remain aloof when every fiber of its being demands action.

Aluminum Supplies

As there has not been sufficient real bauxite discovered in the United States to supply the demands, American manufacturers should "take a leaf" from the German books on "how-to-make-it" from what you have.

Director Lilienthal, of the TVA was recently quoted as saying: "We are extracting one ton of alumina from six tons of clay, with 33 per cent alumina content."

Forty-two years ago, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, reported an analysis of clay samples sent from this district, as containing 32 per cent alumina.

This entire section of Maryland, is underlaid with this grade of fire clay, and one deposit of it, within 27 miles of Washington, D. C., contains 575,000 tons (according to a survey made by the Industrial Development Department of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.) was offered to the Government, for five cents per ton (this grade of clay is quoted by the United States Department of Mines, at $2.73 per ton) but the stockholders evidently thought the offer a "joke."

There are 32 States, in which fire clay is mined, and when the United States Government obtains permission from the aluminum trust, it can produce all the aluminum required for every industry . . . and it will not cost $20,000,000 to erect 20 plants in 20 different States.

Questions Availability Of Convoys

An immediate decision on the burning question of convoys does not rest entirely upon reaching an agreement between two conflicting opinions. There remain very practical considerations as to what vessels are to do the convoying and where they are to be obtained. The answers to both questions, it would seem to the writer, have been ignored or but lightly touched upon by both sides to the controversy.

Summarizing first the points of agreement, it is indisputable that in order to reach their destinations in comparative safety the fleets of merchant ships carrying military supplies to the British Isles, or to theaters of war in the Near East, must be convoyed by naval vessels of the appropriate type. Battleships are useless for this purpose; the imperative need is for destroyers and, possibly, for airplane carriers to spot and destroy on the sea or from the air the submarine and bomber raiders. It is a well known fact that the bulk of the American Navy—the battleship fleet with attendant cruisers, destroyers, airplane carriers and submarines—is in the Pacific, based on Hawaii. It is also common knowledge that in the Atlantic there remain only two or three American battleships and these, over age or near it, are used chiefly for training purposes. Accurate information is not available to civilians as to the number of destroyers and light cruisers in these waters, but their duty is to patrol and, if need be, guard not only the coast line of the United States, but also wide areas in the Caribbean and the newly acquired naval and airplane bases, from Greenland to Trinidad.

The sending of 50 destroyers to Britain has depleted the potential strength of this destroyer branch of the Navy and, while doubtless an even greater number remain in American service, it is permissible to assume that most of them are in the Pacific with the battleship fleet. To draw heavily on these complementary squadrons for convoy duty in the Atlantic sea lanes or, in smaller measure, to guard the not yet seriously threatened routes from South America around Africa to the Indian Ocean and the Red Sea, is to unbalance the Pacific fleet, with commensurate and understandable consequences.

Our Pacific fleet at this moment is superior in numbers, in quality and in effectiveness to the fleet of any country in the world. It is a balanced fleet, every part of which supplements and coordinates with every part to make an efficient whole.

Is it wise to risk immobilizing the most powerful fleet in the world for the sake of obtaining the temporary use of a portion of it for convoy duty in the Atlantic?

The writer, like most of the American people, is manifestly a layman in naval strategy. Nevertheless, before running into momentous decisions, however desirable, on the question of convoys in the Atlantic, a puzzled Nation is entitled to authoritative responses on three interrelated and vitally important questions: (1) have we enough destroyers in the Atlantic, including the Caribbean and the patrol zones off North and South America, to spare any considerable number from these waters for convoying to Britain; (2) if not, are we going to unbalance the Pacific fleet by withdrawing necessary units from that area for duty in quite another part of the world; and (3) if that last is done, will the measure of success expected from the operation of convoying present and temporary shipments of defense materials to Britain outweigh the certain risk of leaving the Pacific open to unwelcome aggressors, intent on establishing and consolidating for all time their tender New Order in eastern Asia?

Gutzon Borglum

Gutzon Borglum, better known for his sculpturingg on Stone Mountain, Ga., and Mount Rushmore, S. Dak., has vanished from the life scene. Yet in different places works of his genius live—in bronze and marble. Despite his nomadic nature, he managed to pause in one locality or another long enough to leave the imprint of his artistic genius—somewhat like the gypsies of song, who scatter flowers wherever their caravans have rested. No matter what the inheritance of other localities may be, the Nation's Capital possesses eight of his creations.

Suppose we also become nomadic and, in this area, become acquainted with Borglum in bronze and marble. Let's make it a foot-trip, at least part of the way, for in Washington's fine spring weather there is both an invitation and an urge to get out in the open for a stroll. Since the course of empire wends its westward way, let's make a western goal stop No. 1. Walking, we find ourselves initially at Twenty-third Street and Massachusetts Avenue, Sheridan Circle, now fenced in temporarily. Borglum fused into this equestrian statue a symbolism of the great cavalry leader during his famous ride down the Shenandoah Valley on October 19, 1864. When meeting his retiring forces, he exclaimed, "Turn, boys, turn; we're going back." Perhaps we brought with us an American history and have time to refresh our memories about this inspiring, courageous episode in national progress.

If, however, we are to take in all the scheduled points before day's end, we must hasten to Potomac Parkway—at the foot of Twenty-sixth Street. Somewhat back from the highway, in keeping with his personal wishes for retreat from society, is a bronze figure of a man who, in life, made name and fame as a stump and platform speaker. Sated with this personal trait is the statue the sculptor brought into being, William Jennings Bryan, orator. While Bryan is mute today, these granite-inscribed words are graphic in reiteration: "You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

Advancing to the Pan American Building, Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue, "North America," emblazoned in gold, fascinates the eye in contrast with the white marble surroundings. A figure of a woman is above the legend, bearing a torch representative of enlightenment and a higher social order, while in her arms she protectively holds a child. This is a Borglum creation in marble.

Time has crept apace and unwillingly steps are sacrificed. We'll now board the magic carpet for a flight to the Capitol. Here we find on view four of Borglum's works of art—two in bronze and two in marble. In Statuary Hall we catch sight of a seated figure, in marble, of Alexander H. Stephens; lawyer, Vice President of the Confederacy, Governor of Georgia, statesman, author, patriot. If in a philosophic mood, you will want to absorb these lines: "I am afraid of nothing on the earth, above the earth, beneath the earth, except to do wrong."

Beside it, as if the designer thought to let all beholders choose between two types of reproductions, is a standing bronze figure of Zebulon B. Vance, lawyer, legislator, colonel in the Confederate army, member of Congress, United States Senator and Governor of North Carolina. Of this work, it is said Borglum felt it was a piece of art that he considered his best characterization.

Forward of these two figures is that of Gen. John C. Greenway, in bronze; a noted mining engineer and distinguished soldier in the War with Spain and the World War. In the rotunda of the Capitol our inquisitive eyes observe a gigantic head of Lincoln—also, a work of Borglum's, and a gift to Congress from a New York connoisseur of art.

Once again we board the magic carpet and, zooming through the air, arrive at Rock Creek Cemetery, the silent city in the Nation's Capital. We pause to gaze at the memorial to Charles Mather Ffoulke, a one-time collector of and authority on tapestries. It is situated in a semicircular enclosure built of rough-hewn granite, with a bronze tablet on its outer side. Within is a draped figure of bronze standing beside an open tomb, inscribed, "Rabboni," meaning "Master."

In a lecture, given a few years ago, Borglum acknowledged that he felt this beautiful piece of sculpture was his masterpiece. This life-size reproduction symbolizes Mary Magdalene as she greeted the Great Gallilean. The sculptor has accurately preserved in the womanish face what might have been the delight and exaltation of that supreme moment in her life.

Now the stern, patriotic command of Gen. Sheridan to his panic-stricken soldiers is an inspiring recollection; the stirring words of "The Commoner" are nearly lost in echo; the appealing face of Mary Magdalene lingers as a sermon in forgiveness. The shades of evening fade out the charms of daylight. Sights once visible are lost by the shift. In such a serene atmosphere one pauses to meditate that a sculptor, by his interpretive art, bequeaths in passing from the mortal scene an enduring heritage to posterity.

A Look At History

By Ernest K. Lindley.

Precedents For Limited War

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has never been bound by precedents. At times he has seemed to delight in shattering them. Certainly precedents, or lack of them, should not tie his hands or ours when any national security is involved. Hitler's Germany is where it is partly because Hitler broke precedents. Precedent-breaking — or record-breaking — is in the American tradition also.

LINDLEY

Precedents, however, are useful when it is desirable to mobilize a maximum of public support. They reassure those who are timid or theoretical.

Out of our own well-documented history — history known to every school child — the President has dug out two notable precedents for employing our Navy to protect American commerce without in a formal sense "going to war." These are the squelching of the North African pirates and the running fight with the British, French and Spanish privateers — and men of war — in the West Indies.

Both precedents have been called to general public attention for months by various writers and speakers. Being thoroughly conversant with American naval history, the President did not need to dip into history books to find them. In unpublished conversations he has spoken of them often and over a long period.

THROUGHOUT the Anglo-French war that began shortly after the French Revolution, our commerce suffered depredations from both England and France. In the Administration of John Adams we almost went to war with France over attacks on our merchantment and the impressment of American seamen. We did build some fighting ships and arm some of our merchantmen. The French backed down and signed the Jay Treaty in 1800. That treaty was unpopular with the war party in the United tates, but it prevented our allying ourselves, in effect, with the English.

The attacks on our commerce continued intermittently. By 1812 we had lost by capture some 900 vessels to the British, and more than 500 to the French. Meanwhile, the Portuguese navy had been neutralized, letting the North African pirates into the Atlantic. We paid the Dey of Algiers $642,500 in cash and promised tribute of $21,600 a year, plus other presents, including one fully equipped frigate. We had paid tribute also to the pirates of Tripoli, Tunis and Morocco.

It was one of our most peace-loving Presidents — author of the "no entangling alliances" phrases so frequently quoted by our isolationists — who turned the infant American Navy loose on the North African pirates. At the end of three years they were thoroughly licked, and American vessels no longer paid tribute. This was a shooting war, of course — but it was almost entirely a naval war, fought at great distances from our shores.

THE PRESIDENT and other spokesmen for the Administration, including Secretary Ickes, who recently wrote on this subject, neglected to point out that our fight for the safety of American shipping led finally to the War of 1812. (If this is Mr. Ickes' idea of skillful propaganda — as I am afraid it is, having read many of his other efforts — let us hope that he never is made American Minister of Propaganda, or Morale, or whatever we may eventually have).

It is sufficient to record that we carried on running naval wars with the pirates, official and semi-official, of France, England and North Africa over a period of some 17 years before we went to war formally with Great Britain, who finally stood out as the worst surviving offender. And when we finally went to war we were not only a weak nation, but we had not prepared even with such materials as we had, including our man-power.

From that period, nevertheless, come some of our most stirring slogans and naval traditions:

"Millions for defense, not one cent for tribute."

"I haven't begun to fight."

"Don't give up the ship."

"We have met the enemy and they are ours."

The President is gradually escaping from some of his own recent utterances, such as: convoys mean shooting, and shooting comes pretty close to war. (That is approximately what he said; not, as he is misquoted as having said flatly: "Convoys mean shooting, and shooting means war.")

Technically, convoys may not be the best way of protecting American shipping. Anyway, so long as the Nentrality Act remains unchanged, American ships cannot go to British ports. They can go, and are going, to ports on the Red Sea and the Suez Canal, which Hitler has declared to be a "combat zone."

The President has said, in effect, that if our merchant ships are bombed, torpedoed, shelled or menaced by mines anywhere, we will take appropriate action. This action may merely be to protect the merchant ships. It may be retaliatory.

In the furthering of our national security, the President need not, and will not, be bound by precedent. But it is reassuring to recall some of the precedents for the protection of American commerce by naval action — and to recall also that our leaders in those days were not afraid to shoot in defense or retaliation, without the formalities or irrevocable commitments involved in "going to war."

The War Draws Near

By Mark Sullivan

Hitler And Martinique

THE NEXT extension of our connection with the war — the next reaching-out of the war toward us — will probably occur in the West Indies. Actual action there may not come as early as somewhere else — just where explosions may take place is hard to foretell. But we can say, as a present fact, that in the West Indies last week the war took a long step in our direction, a long step in the actual physical sense. This step we must take notice of. Without doubt our Government is already prepared to do instantaneously whatever we may be called on to do.

SULLIVAN

The step last week was the French submission to Germany. Because the French have dependencies in American waters, Germany now comes closer to us. Though the exact terms and understandings of the French submission have not been made public, it is necessary to assume they include granting to Germany certain rights — or privileges or what-not — in French colonial dependencies. Already we have seen that apparently the French submission gave Germany the right to send military forces to the French dependency of Syria. We may assume the French gave Germany the same privilege as respects the French possessions in American waters — the island of Martinique, some smaller West Indian islands, a bit of the South American mainland, and two islands near Newfoundland.

FROM THE DAY the war began, a direct concern to us was the American possessions of European nations which Germany might conquer. From the first day, these possessions were a potential involvement of us — and a potential denial of those who said America could avoid involvement. As the war went on, the involvement became actual, because Germany did conquer three European countries having American dependencies. The three are:

France, possessing the dependencies already named; Holland, possessing islands in the West Indies and one bit of South American mainland; Denmark possessing Greenland.

When Germany conquered these three countries, she by that act acquired some kind of relation to the American dependencies of these countries. What the relation was is difficult to define. In a dispatch some time ago I described the relation as "some kind of title to the American territories of the conquered nations." For using that form of words I have been reproved, justly, by readers learned in international law. Mr. Ralph F. Lozier points out in The Washington Post that "title by conquest extends only to the territory actually conquered and seized by the triumphant nation."

That is true. But it is also true that when Germany conquered Denmark, Holland and France, she acquired the power to put compulsion on those countries to do, with respect to their American possessions, whatever Germany might want them to do. This compulsion, Germany has now exercised upon France. Germany now has some kind or other of right, or privilege, or what-not, in the French possessions in American waters. The right may be to establish naval or air bases. The right may be more than that or less than that. Practically, the right can be whatever Germany wants it to be. If Germany demands that France turn over to Germany the whole title and possession of her American dependencies, France might well submit.

TO UNDERSTAND what this means to us, bear in mind an American policy. It is the oldest and most uncompromising policy we have in the field of foreign relations. It was originally expressed in the Monroe Doctrine, has been repeated in many resolutions of Congress, emphasized in many communications to foreign countries, and in the past upheld by threat on our part to use arms.

The doctrine has to do with dependencies in American waters owned by European nations. So long as these dependencies continue in the ownership of the nations that have long owned them, we have no objection — the present ownership extends far back in history to before the Monroe Doctrine was announced. But, as respects any transfer of those dependencies, our fixed policy may be expressed thus:

The United States will not assent to the transfer of any territory in the American hemisphere, from one non-American nation to another.

The problem now presented to us by the French possessions in American waters, is delicate. We do not know that any overt transfer to Germany has been made. We must assume that Germany can compel a transfer if she wishes. We must assume that, some time in the future, Germany is likely to compel a transfer — for the purpose of an air or naval base at least. At the same time we cannot safely wait until the transfer is actually made — until German soldiers, sailors and airmen actually take possession. For by that time Germany would have conquered England — only in the event of conquest of England, with her naval power, could Germany undertake to get possession of the dependencies of conquered nations in American waters.

The war is now as near to us as Martinique is to Florida or the Panama Canal.

Separate Army, Navy Air Corps, Like Marines, Urged on Forum

Representative Melvin Mass (Republican), of Minnesota, last night suggested that both the Army and Navy set up separate air crops, similar to the Marine Corps' relation to the Navy.

His suggestion was offered in opposition to the proposal of Maj. Alexander de Seversky, airplane designer and aviation authority, that this country's air power be divorced from Army and Navy control and a separate air arm be formed "before our program of national defense has congealed in a wrong and backward pattern."

Representative Mass defended in general, the present design of this Nation's air strength and was seconded by Representative Ed Gossett (Democrat), of Texas. Maj. de Seversky's plan for a changed air force system was agreed with by J. Reagan McCrary, chief editorial writer for the New York Daily Mirror. All spoke on the American Forum of the Air broadcast over a Mutual network from the Willard Hotel.

Pointing out the difference between Navy and Army aviation, Representative Maas said: "To try to make a naval aviator and an Army aviator out of the same individual is very likely to result in a pilot's becoming thoroughly accomplished in neither branch of aviation."

In urging the formation of separate corps within both branches of the service, Representative Maas said, "This is no proof that aviation is in itself separate from either the Army or Navy."

Maj. de Seversky said that "to split the air comand between Army and Navy, as we are now doing, is like drawing a chalk line through the skies. Those who insist on the illogical and utterly childish division of American air power into two artificial segments are assuming a fearful responsibility before the judgment of history."

Representative Gossett declared, "Under a separate air force the question of priority as to types and quantities of ships, as to personnel, as to operations, would be a constant source of friction, a three-pronged fight, between Army, Navy and independent air force."

The need of the present time "is centralization, not decentralization of military power," he said.

McCrary urged that "some such man as Mayor LaGuardia of New York" be appointed Secretary of Aviation. He said there are inadequacies in this country's present air defenses, declaring it will be 1942 before the Army has sufficient antiaircraft guns.

Senate And Ships

By Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner

Light On Public Opinion

THERE IS a useful old rule of politics that Congress never gets very far from the people. It is doubly true at the moment. First, Senators and Representatives are still automatically responding, as they always do, to their notion of their constituents' will. Second, they are now dealing with vast and novel issues, and being no more familiar with these issues than the average American, they react to them in a thoroughly average way.

ALSOP

Seen in this light, the Senate vote on the ship seizure bill last week becomes one of the first dependable indications of the current state of the public mind. It is not as discouraging as those persons would have you believe who keep whispering, "Lindbergh is gaining." Yet it is certainly not encouraging. Indeed, at the instant in history when France was reaching her heavy decision; when the fate of the Mediterranean was trembling in a crooked balance, and when the battle of the Atlantic was going to the enemy, the Senate vote on the ship seizure bill had an almost fantastic lack of relation to reality.

YOUR CORRESPONDENTS have asked several of the shrewdest Senate leaders to analyze the vote in a practical way. The analysis generally agreed to break the votes down pretty simply and clearly.

The significant voting took place on the amendment offered by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, to forbid direct transfer to British use of ships requisitioned from the Axis powers. It was defeated, but by the narrow margin of 43 to 38. With a few exceptions, such as Gerry, of Rhode Island, the 43 who voted against the amendment may be considered dependable supporters of the President's policy of all-out aid to Britain. If convoying, or other bolder steps are necessary, they will go along. They are the Senators who made up the narrow majority for convoys which the Administration leaders found in their confidential poll for the President of two or three weeks ago.

There was no such unanimity, however, among the 38 Senators who backed Vanderberg's scheme. Among them, first of all, was a well-defined group of all-outers on the other side, including the four Democratic isolationist bitter-enders, Wheeler, Bulow and the two Clarks, of Idaho and Missouri; such Republicans as Taft, Vandenberg himself and young Danahar, of Connecticut, and the Wisconsin Progressive, La Follette. By the test of the final vote on the bill, this group may force four or five of the 15 Republicans belonging to it to desert eventually, but the desertions are unlikely to occur until after this country has made its final choice about the war.

Subtracting the 20, therefore, 18 of the 38 pro-Vandenberg votes remain to be explained. Of the 18, according to the analysis above-mentioned, a small number cast their votes as they did because they were habitual carriers of water on both shoulders, always trying to please everyone, and careless of contradictions. Another three or four, among whom the Republican chieftain, wise McNary, of Oregon, should probably be included, were Republicans who went along because the amendment's most active sponsor was a member of their party. And finally, there were perhaps 10 men who voted for the amendment because they considered it an important improvement to the bill. Their argument was that the ships should be seized, because Britain needed shipping, but that the ships should not be transferred directly to Britain, since this would be offensive to Germany. They wanted, instead, to transfer an equivalent tonnage of our own ships.

THE STATE OF MIND revealed by these ten Senators was the really interesting aspect of the ship seizure vote. They may be taken, and were taken by both pro and anti Administration strategists, as representing the undecided group in the country which really holds the balance of power. This group holds the balance of power because such steps as must now be taken in the war, if the war is to be won, cannot be taken without strong support. Shift the ten Senators, and you would have a vote of 53 to 28, or almost two to one, which is strong enough support for any measure, however controversial. Shift the group they represent among the people, and you would have a public opinion driving the President to act, rather than holding him back.

KINTNER

The state of mind of the ten Senators can only be described as muddled, in view of the practical situation. They wished to help the British, but they wished to avoid offending the Germans. In order to do this, they resorted to a subterfuge that would be transparent to the simplest of village idiots. The theory that the men now in command in Nazi Germany would be any less offended by the gift of an equivalent tonnage of our own ships to the British, rather than the gift of German and Italian ships, is a theory chiefly remarkable for naivete.

So long as these Senators continue muddled, and so long as the people they represent in the country continue muddled, American policy will continue to be hesitant and confused. But there is still ground for hope. Most of the ten Senators are men capable of learning from the facts. And if the true facts of the critical situation in which the country finds itself are clearly and bluntly explained to them, they may be relied on to react in a very different way.

Federal Reserve Notes Sharp Rise in Commodity Prices

Sharp advances in business commodity prices in April and the first half of May, with the exception principally of metals for which maximum prices had been established under the defense program, were reported yesterday by the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System in a summary of general business and financial conditions.

The board also cited the effects of labor disputes in recording a steep decline in industrial production in April, although noting a rapid recovery in the first half of May as operations in the coal and automobile industries were resumed.

"In April," the summary said, "the board's seasonally adjusted index of industrial production declined to 139 per cent of the 1935-1939 average, a drop of 4 points from March. The decdcline reflected chiefly a sharp reduction in output of bituminous coal, as most mines were closed during the entire month. The mines were reopened on April 30 and in the first half of May coal output increased rapidly.

"Automobile production also declined in April, owing to stoppage of work at plants of the Ford Motor Co. during an industrial dispute. This was settled about the middle of the month and domestic output has since advanced to a high monthly rate of over 500,000 cars and trucks."

The board also said steel production declined in the latter part of April, due to shortage of coal and coke. It fell from a 100 per cent capacity production to 94 at the month-end, but went back to 99 by mid-May.

The coal stoppage also brought about a reduction in railroad business in April, the board noted. "Freight car loadings declined sharply in April, reflecting a reduction in shipments of coal and coke, but increased in the first half of May, when coal mines opened," it said.

"Price increases were most pronounced for agricultural commodities reflecting in part the prospect of legislation raising Federal loan rates for basic farm crops," the board said in referring to the 85 per cent parity loan bill, now on President Roosevelt's desk.

Automobile sales in April exceeded 526,000 cars and trucks sold in March while sales of used cars reached a new high. Retail sales made their usual seasonal spring rise.

Bank loans and investments have risen since last summer, the increase at reporting banks in 101 cities amounting to $4,000,000,000. This reflected large purchases of Reconstruction Finance Corporation securities. Excess reserves of Federal Reserve Member banks totaled $5,700,000,000 on May 14, a drop of $1,100,000,000 under the January peak, due largely to Treasury deposits in Reserve Banks and increased currency in circulation.

Government bonds declined in mid-May, dropping 1¼ points below the all-time peak in December.

The Once Over

"I'm An American"

If you don't need gala posters and pep talks to make you feel so.

If "I Am an American Day" is no different from any other day so far as your patriotism is concerned.

If the most alluring pictures of Miss Liberty by the most famous artists fail to come up to your own enthusiastic impressions of the lady.

If even the best broadcast of an American Day program leaves you feeling that it lacked something.

If an old-fashioned, faded and crudely done sketch of Yankee Doodle gives you a bigger thrill than the most modern painting of America as a glamour girl by a modern illustrator.

If, no matter how much you disagree with another good American's views, you respect his right to express them.

If Senator Wheeler can give you a pain in the neck and still leave you tolerant.

If, even when you hear your own voice expressing opinions you are conscious of a still small voice saying "Not so dogmatic, please. I'm not infallible, either."

If, when you read your own writings on justice, liberty and the war, you can pause and reflect, "After all, there's a chance I'm only half right."

If you have a feeling you are more effective on your knees in prayer, in a time that tries men's souls, than you are on your feet in front of a mike.

If you can't help joining in the national anthem even if you were class monotone as a boy and never got any better.

If you never go through a day in this grave emergency without wishing you could do more for your country.

If you can write a wild letter to the editor denouncing somebody who disagreed with you — and then tear it up.

If you can hear any man all through a speech that displeases you and not call him an appeaser, a fifth columnist, a wood-pussy or a Nazi agent.

If you feel just as sentimental toward Old Glory flapping in the breeze anywhere as you did when you saw the Stars and Stripes in your first Fourth of July parade.

If you buy all the defense bonds you can afford.

If you would rather hear one song by Francis Scott Key than everything any other composer ever wrote.

If, with every passing day, every fresh emergency, every new war horror leaves you with a feeling that you MUST be of more help some way.

If you can hear Dorothy Thompson and Slim Lindbergh the same night and admit they both mean well.

If you belong to the Committee to Aid Brtiain and don't denounce every member of the America First Committee as a Bundist.

If you can always say "Hear him out!" instead of "Throw him out!"

If you can say with Stephen Decatur, "Right or wrong, my country!"

Hitler's palace has double-cross ventilation.

Lesson Of Vichy

By Barnet Nover

What The Capitulation Means To Us

THE DEAL which the Vichy government has made with Hitler means nothing less than the surrender of the French empire to the Nazis. That is why the United States cannot permit that development to pass unchallenged. That is why every reason of self-interest demands that we do everything in our power to counteract it and do so as speedily as possible.

For the moment, the part of the French empire which Hitler is most interested in is Syria. He needs Syria as a base from which to rush supplies to his Arab Quisling, Rashid Ali el-Gailani, and as the spearpoint for an ultimate drive on Suez from the north. With the connivance of Vichy and of the local authorities taking orders from Vichy, Nazi planes began to arrive in Syria en route to Iraq even before the Petain regime gave its formal approval to the Darlan-Hitler deal.

NOVER

Like the rest of the French Empire, Syria had been out of the war since last June. Some of the French there wanted to continue the fight on the side of Britain. They were mercilessly persecuted by the men of Vichy and their stooges. Now Syria is back in the war — on the German side. The British would have been derelict in their duty to themselves and their allies had they closed their eyes to this development and failed to act in accordance with the needs arising out of it. So far as they are concerned, Syria is a battlefield chosen by the enemy.

HITLER has not yet repeated in French North or West Africa what he has done in Syria. It is understood that Gen. Weygand is determined to resist a Nazi occupation of the area under his control. This may be wishful thinking, on a par with the long-held belief that Marshal Petain would never permit France to become the tool of the Nazis in the war against Great Britain. But even if it is true that the attitude of Weygand is not that of the men of Vichy the fact is clear that Weygand would not be able to resist once the Nazis had made themselves masters of the Eastern Mediterranean and forced the British out of Alexandria and Suez.

The Nazis have not forgotten North Africa. They have a considerable force in Libya which at the moment appears to be bogged down somewhere in the vicinity of the Libyan-Egyptian border. This force is being strengthened. There is no reason why in due course it cannot become large enough to move into Tunisia as well as challenging the British in Egypt. In the meantime, German agents have been very busy organizing elaborate Fifth Columns in France's African colonies so that Weygand would not be able to resist, when the showdown comes, even should he desire to do so. These agents are ostensibly members of the German Armistice Commission set up under the terms of the armistice, but their work has taken them far afield. For they received from Admiral Darlan carte blanche to travel about French Morocco as they please.

IF SUEZ FALLS French North Africa will fall like a ripe plum into Hitler's hands. But he is taking no chances. But even if the British manage to hold out in the Eastern Mediterranean he is preparing to assail them in the west. In particular, he has his eye on Morocco's Atlantic ports, such as Casablanca, and such vital strategic centers of French West Africa as Dakar. In control of Casablanca and Dakar he would be in a position to harass British shipping in the South Atlantic and, also to break the British blockade by opening a sea lane between South America and Africa.

In this connection the future role of the French fleet may well be considered. Some time ago Admiral Darlan announced that if Great Britain did not permit supplies to reach unoccupied France through the blockade the French fleet would be used to convoy such supplies. And there is no reason, given the kind of "collaboration" envisaged in the Darlan-Hitler deal, why the French fleet would not be used to convoy German as well as French ships across the South Atlantic.

FROM THE VIEWPOINT of the defense of the Americas a German occupation of Dakar which must now be reckoned with as a possibility in the not too distant future would be an extremely serious development. Dakar is very much closer to the bulge of Brazil than is Hawaii to any point in continental United States. To permit Dakar to fall into Hitler's hands would be as fatal a mistake on our part as to allow Honolulu to be taken over by the Japanese.

Even with Hawaii lost we might still be able to defend San Francisco, just as Great Britain has managed to defend London, though the European Continent was taken over by the enemy. The cost has been tremendous, however. Actually not even the most rabid isolationist would agree to turn over the Hawaiian Islands to Japan in an effort to secure the friendship of that country. By the same token we cannot afford to let Hitler take Dakar either directly or through the connivance of the Vichy government.

That regime has now definitely aligned itself with the enemies of Britain. There is no reason why it should be treated by the United States with kid gloves. The fact which should now be apparent to all but the most purblind is that the defense of the Americas cannot be regarded as beginning and ending at the 3-mile limit. It begins at the point which a potential enemy can use as a jumping-off place for an attack on this hemisphere. Such a spot is Dakar.

Workers Volunteer For 60-Hour Week

New York, May 18 (AP).—The New York Times said today that C. I. O. workers at the Ford Instrument Co. plant in Queens had declared themselves ready to work 60 hours weekly, in order to ease a shortage of skilled precision workers in the defense program.

With 200 workers in the tool and die department already on a 60-hour schedule, most of the 1,300 other employes, now working 48 hours, expect to be asked to put in more hours when the company obtains machinery for two new buildings.

The United Instrument Workers, Local 425 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America has a union shop agreement governing all the plant's employes.

Output of the company, a subsidiary of the Sperry Corp., goes to the Navy.

The plant has been operating three shifts, 24 hours a day, six days a week. Adoption of a 60-hour program, with expanded facilities, would raise production 25 per cent.

Society Goes to Country For Teas and Luncheon

Society took to the great outdoors yesterday, with several luncheons and al fresco teas drawing people from the city. With the day a perfect one, there was a tremendous exodus to visit friends in the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stettinius, who are entertaining at a series of Sunday luncheons this spring, gave another one yesterday at their place in Orange, Va., near Rapidan. Honor guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, who made the two-hour motor trip early in the morning so they could have a swim before lunch.

The Stettinius farm is called The Horse Shoe," appropriately enough, for the owners breed horses there. Luncheon yesterday was served buffet style with many guests wandering about the lawns before and after. Several members of Congress were in the company.

A little more than half way to Orange, another pleasant luncheon was going on. Mrs. Amory Perkins entertained a group of Washington friends at an all-day affair.

Sports Enjoyed Before Luncheon

Mrs. Perkins' home, Journey's End, is just outside of Middleburg. Set high on a hill with a beautiful view of the countryside it has a spacious lawn surrounded by gardens. At one side is a swimming pool with small adjoining bathhouse, and several of the guests took a cool plunge before luncheon. Tennis was also the order of the day, and it was late in the afternoon before the homeward trek to Washington began.

Honor guest was Philip Broadmead, a former secretary of the British Embassy. For the last couple of years Mr. Broadmead has been dodging bombs in Chungking, as counselor of the embassy there. He is pausing in Washington for a few days before going to Rio de Janeiro, where he will be attached to the embassy there.

Lady Lindsay, whose husband, Sir Ronald Lindsay, was the British Ambassador while Mr. Broadmead was here, was among the guests. Also from the Embassy came the Military Attache and Mrs. Beaumont-Nesbitt, and Angus Malcolm, who is serving as secretary to Lord Halifax.

Representative and Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth and Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey motored down for the day. Other guests were the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Anthony Balasy, Mr. and Mrs. George Howe, Peter Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Coffin, Miss Irene Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker and Robert Brant.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long and Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar were others entertaining at country luncheons yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Long were hosts at Montpelier Manor, their Maryland home, and Mr. and Mrs. del Mar had friends in at Oakland Plantation, their house near Frederick.

Mr. and Mrs. Cafritz Entertain

The tea which Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz gave yesterday afternoon was held at their home on Foxhall Road, but it might just as well have been in the country. Their modern residence of white stone is set in beautiful grounds, on a rise which commands a beautiful view. The flower beds were full of blooms and an orchestra played on one of the terraces.

Many guests were so fascinated by Mrs. Cafritz's modern home that they went indoors to admire the dining room lined with mirrors and the bleached mahogany furniture. Some went to the second floor to see the new portrait of the hostess. In this picture, she wears the gown she chose yesterday, floor length chartreuse crepe with a slight train and a slit skirt. A corsage of white orchids completed her costume.

Generally assisting at the party was her mother, Mrs. Lazlo Detre, who wore beige lace and purple orchids. Mrs. Cafritz's sister, Mrs. Detre Raffler, was present, wearing street-length white chiffon.

Everywhere was heard exclamations as to the marvelous view. When a guest pointed out the Capitol to Senator Theodore Green, he laughed and said, "I've seen that before."

Mrs. Cafritz received in the drawing room, which has murals done in a modern interpretation of Greek art. The tea table was centered with a cluster of spring blossoms, white and yellow predominating.

The Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora Martins came in after a motor trip to the country. Mrs. McCeney Warlich, who gave a luncheon at Stratford earlier in the day, and Edward Van Devanter, one of her guests, were a twosome. Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith and Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken were telling friends how much they had enjoyed the Stettinius luncheon.

The Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky and the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza were among the many present from the diplomatic corps. Mrs. J. L. Houghteling accompanied her husband, wearing a blue and white tailored frock with a small blue hat. One of the prettiest chapeaux was Mrs. Drury's broadbrimmed yellow straw, worn well back on her head.

Maj. and Mrs. Mackenzie Davison threaded their way through the throng. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson and Maj. Burdette Fitch chatted with friends while Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja made the rounds. Miss Bertha Noyes, Miss Lydia Loring, and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, were others present.

Pouring tea at the party were Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. William Flather, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. H. Clifford Bangs, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, who will leave this week for her home in Connecticut; Mrs. Harold Walker and Miss Elizabeth Howry.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

CHIEF TOPIC of conversation in the hunt country yesterday was the wedding on Saturday of Mrs. Carver Havemeyer, of New York, and Dr. Seth A. Von Brumm, of Philadelphia. They were married at Kelvedon Farm, the home of Col. and Mrs John C. Buelear near Middleburg, in a quiet ceremony witnessed by a few intimate friends. The Rev. Ellison A. Smyth, of Warrenton, officiated.

The bride had been visiting the Butlers for a week and Dr. Von Brumm arrived on Friday for a dinner given for them that night by the Butlers. Mrs. Von Brumm was Miss Aninha Carver, of New York, daughter of Mrs. Alexander B. Carver of that city and the late Rev. Carver. Her first husband was the late Lloyd Undutch, of Baltimore. Later she married John H. Livingston, of New York, and after being divorced from him, married Frederick Havemeyer, from whom she was also divorced. She has four sons, Billy and Donald Livingston, now at Camp Stuart, Savannah, Ga.; Carter Livingston, at Andover, and Jock Livingston at the Litchfield school.

DR. VON BRUMM is a noted Philadelphia physician and they will live at his old home, Far View Farm, Valley Forge.

The couple were married in the living room at Kelvedon, in front of an exquisite old mantel which was banked with spring flowers. Col. Butler was best man. Later a seated dinner was given for the couple at the Red Fox Tavern, with friends coming in afterwards for dancing. The Butlers turned their home over to them for the weekend and they left last night for a Southern trip amid a shower of rice.

LIEUT Marshall Wallach, U. S. A., is expected at his home near Warrenton about June 10 from Fort Riley, Kan. He will be married in June to Miss Elizabeth Wilbur, of Warrenton before taking up his new duties in Texas near the Mexican border. The couple will be married at Loretta, the home of her mother, Mrs. Frederick Haserick.

MR. AND MRS. George A. Garrett spent a quiet weekend at their Virginia place, Chilly Bleak, near Marshall. Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Frederick Prince attended services at the Episcopal Church at The Plains in the morning. The Garretts expect to spend the month of June at their Virginia home.

CHARLES PERKINS, JR., of V. P. I. and Middleburg, Va., and Jack Butler, jr., of Princeton University and Rectortown, Va., have planned a pack trip this summer. They will motor as far as Chicago with Mr. Perkins' mother, Mrs. Amory Perkins, and will then go to Montana. There they will pick up their horses and ride for two months before reaching California. They will visit Charles E. Perkins, Mr. Perkins' father, before returning to Virginia.

MR. AND MRS. Edwin Paul Wanner, of New York, lately of Charleston, S. C., have been visiting in Virginia for the last month. On Friday they purchased an attractive farm at Little Washington, in the foothills of the Blue Ridge. The place, Jasemin Hill, has 500 acres and a beautiful old brick house which the Wanners will remodel at once. Mrs. Wanner was formerly Mrs. Gladys Stewart and at one time lived at Glenara near Marshall, Va.

MR. AND MRS. W. D. Ullein, of Milwaukee, have arrived at Red Fox Tavern for a visit. They are the parents of Mrs. Luddington Patton, of Middleburg. The Pattons gave a luncheon for them yesterday at their home in the country.

Gage, last colonial Governor of Massachusetts. The house is noted for the only sandal wood front in the country besides Mount Vernon and contains many painted and stenciled floors. It is furnished with authentic Queen Anne and Chippendale furniture.

Gay Parties Are Staged Over Weekend

May is traditionally the merriest month in Washington, and last weekend was one of the gayest so far. Several people got up impromptu cocktail parties, ringing up their friends at the last minute.

There was much coming and going on Saturday afternoon between Ralph Snowden Hill's home in Georgetown and the Mayflower, where Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., gave a party for Mr. and Mrs. John Ringling North of circus fame. Mr. Hill gathered a few friends for a look at his garden, where the ivy covered walls and terrace were much admired.

Opening onto Mr. Hill's garden is a tiled playroom with a tinkling fountain, attractive glass tables and comfortable easy chairs. Some gathered there, while others sat in the garden.

Among those who dropped by were Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, who had been to "Evie" Robert's party; Mrs. Waggaman Pulver, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey and Gen. Allen Gullion, who arrived with Mrs. Natalie Phillips from the tea given by Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim.

Mr. and Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke motored up from Virginia for the party. Mr. Duke is a corporal at the Army training camp there. Other guests included Col. and Mrs. Percy Black, Mrs. John Dunlap and Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, who came on from the Guggenheims.

Col. and Mrs. Guggenheim had planned a lawn party, but showers drove the guests inside. The Guggenheim home on Macomb Street is one of those rare residences spacious enough to hold a party originally intended for outdoors. It seemed as though fully half of Washington society was there, and many lingered on after 7.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

DINING WITH Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins the other evening in Georgetown, I met attractive Miss Giselle Shaw from Argentina. Though born and reared in Argentina, Miss Shaw is of Irish descent and the combination of Erin and Latin America is most charming. Miss Shaw is slim and chic with auburn hair and white skin. She is a confirmed globe-trotter and traveler to far places and is living proof of the theory that "he travels fastest who travels alone."

The other night she was speaking of Iraq and of her interest in the Arabs. She told us of the very touching memorial dedicated by the Arabs to the famous Englishwoman, Gertrude Bell. On it is written that Gertrude Bell was the Arabs' true friend and the only foreigner whom they trusted as one of themselves.

In spite of her sheltered Argentine background, Miss Shaw is very independent and doesn't wait for an escort when traveling. Once in Iraq she visited a native bazaar alone and had to be rescued by a passing Englishman when she found herself surrounded by threatening natives. "But, of course, I shouldn't have been there," said Miss Shaw frankly.

Miss Shaw is keenly interested in prison reform, especially among women. She has been visiting prisons all over the United States and says that this country is by far the most enlightened in the world when it comes to care of prisoners, especially women. Miss Shaw has visited Alcatraz and finds it excellently run. She struck a cheerful note when she told us that now that there are jobs there are less prisoners.

SERIOUS SUBJECTS hold us so much these days that a cool drink and a chat with friends is a pleasant interlude more appreciated than ever before. Countess Van Rechteren Limpurg asked friends in the other afternoon at cocktail time and Count Van Rechteren being absent on a trip, acted as host and hostess combined. Pretty Fay Van Rechteren is one of those delightful people utterly without pretensions. Recently, wishing to leave a telephone message for a friend, she said to the friend's maid, "Just say the name is 'restaurant' or very like it."

Among Countess Van Rechteren's guests that afternoon were the Van Swinderens—he is the former Dutch Minister to Britain and she is the sister of Carroll Glover—who have just returned from a short visit in New York, Baroness Van Boetzelaer, wife of the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, and Dr. H. N. Boon, the second secretary.

MAJ. AND MRS. John Newbold arrived to find her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Wilkins, there ahead of them, —the Wilkinses live next door to the Van Rechterens. Being welcomed by old friends was pretty Mrs. Edward S. Crocker, whose husband is First Secretary of the United States Embassy in Tokyo. Countess van Rechteren knew the Crockers when Count van Rechteren was en post in Japan.

Mrs. Kent Legare was smart in a black frock worn with a coat of printed crepe and Mrs. Anthony Coleby and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold had chosen spring prints. Proving that they are good at remembering names and faces were the new Second Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. R. E. Barclay and Admiral Danckwerts of the Royal Navy. Others present included Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Commander William D. Thomas and C. Mathews Dick.

Norman Frosts Give Garden Party In Chevy Chase

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Frost gave a garden party yesterday at their home on the outskirts of Washington in Chevy Chase, Md. The bar was set up on their lawn and decorated with peonies and other spring flowers from their garden.

The hostess wore a floor length frock of white embroidered organdy, fashioned with a bouffant skirt. Assisting her were Mrs. Joseph Marr, Mrs. Harold Titus, Mrs. George Horning, Mrs. Frank Myers, Mrs. Frederick Towers, Mrs. Harry van de Koolwyk, Mrs. John G. Capers and Mrs. Allan C. Minnix.

Meyerses at Home Here After Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Meyers, who were married April 26, have returned from a brief honeymoon in Richmond and are at home at 1620 Fuller Street. The bride is the former Miss Rosalie Robin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Robin, and Mr. Meyers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Meyers, of New York.

The couple were married in Alexandria.

The Blackwells On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Harry Blackwell, jr., who were married on Saturday, will make their home at the Falkland Apartment, Silver Spring, after a wedding trip to Miami. The bride is the former Miss Gertrude Emily Barnum, daughter of Mrs. Edwin H. Barnum, and Mr. Blackwell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell, of this city.

The couple were wed at St. Ann's Church, and a reception followed at Mrs. Barnum's home. The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Charles M. Mathews, wore a gown made with a white lace bodice and a net skirt over satin. Her veil was attached to a headdress of seed pearls and she carried white roses and orchids. Mrs. Esther Kinsman was matron of honor, wearing turquoise lace and net and carrying roses. The bridesmaids were the Misses Sue Stokes, Margaret Smith, Florence Miller and Margery Oyster. They were dressed like the matron of honor in pastel shades of yellow, blue and pink. Lucy Tyson Fitzhugh was flower girl and A. Jay Dawson was ring bearer. The former wore pink net with a taffeta poke bonnet.

Richard Brown Blackwell was best man for his brother and the ushers were Andrew J. Dawson, Preston Taylor, George Talbott and Armand Cyr.

The bride attended Dunbarton College and the Katharine Gibbs School and Mr. Blackwell studied at Columbus University Law School.

Nature Study Unit To Visit Stratford And Wakefield

The Nature Study Section of the Twentieth Century Club, on Wednesday, will visit Stratford and Wakefield, going by bus in the morning and having luncheon at Stratford.

Mrs. Charles Thomas Watson, 1419 Clifton Street, chairman of the section is taking reservations, which must be in by today.

The gardens are particularly beautiful at this season, Mrs. Watson says, and bird migration is at its height, adding another feature of special interest to the nature study group. The menu at Stratford will comprise home cured ham, vegetables raised on the plantation and flour ground on the place from wheat raised there.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Not a Thing to Wear

Your closet is so full of clothes that you get completely befuddled trying to find anything. And yet you haven't a thing on earth to wear. Why that is the real reason you are staying home from the Swanks' party!

Well, you are going to do something about it right now. Take everything out you don't need and give or throw it away. Pare your wardrobe down to a few good essentials and build from there. That's the way really smart women do.

You pile all the doubtfuls, all the deadwood, on the couch and chairs. Now positively nothing is going back into the closet that you do not actually wear or need. With a set jaw you begin your inventory:

Item 1.—Rust black crepe evening dress with sheath skirt and frayed lame jacket.

(That must go . . . no, I'll save the jacket—it might be fixed up—and give away the dress. Still . . . of course sheath skirts may come back . . . there was something in the paper the other day . . . oh, well, I might as well keep the whole thing another year.)

Item 2—Gaudy flowered chiffon evening dress.

(That certainly was a mistake . . . Never wore it but once . . . never will again . . . Still it's sort of pretty—OFF. And maybe I might want to dress up and look real feminine some Sunday evening just for the family.)

Item 3.—White moire evening jacket that shrunk in the cleaning.

(This is one thing that is surely going to the Goodwill . . . I simply can't get into it . . . Still . . . the buttons are pretty . . . Oh, I might as well put it back.)

Item 4.—Long black taffeta skirt bought to go with white moire evening jacket.

(This never did fit . . . or go with anything . . . Why keep it? . . . Still it's perfectly good . . . and maybe some time I could find a cute little jacket . . .)

Item 5.—Red chiffon blouse bought to go with taffeta skirt.

Item 6.—White evening skirt bought to go with red chiffon blouse.

(I'll simply have to keep this a while longer. Maybe some time I'll find something to go with it.)

Item 7.—White satin blouse made to go with white skirt.

(If only it had been the right shade of white! Well, of course, some time I might have it dyed.)

Item 8.—Flowered cotton daytime dress bought during last Summer's heat wave.

(If only I had the sense never to buy in a hurry! I simply can't bear to put this on so why keep it? . . . Still, if there was a terrible heat wave this summer and I wanted something to put on for a day or two . . . better keep it.)

Item 9.—Pink cotton lace dress made by "little dressmaker" who came to the house.

(If only I had the fortitude never to walk through the piece goods of a department store! . . . The quicker this goes the better—though it is good lace. And it might sometime be combined with something . . .)

Items 11 to 15.—Outfits that have become drab and tired, outfits that have that indefinable air of belonging to nobody, outfits that are on the brink of the grave.

(I'll just throw them all away and be done with them—No, I'd be sure to want them later . . . Oh, well, I'll just hang them all back in the closet—for the time being.)

It's a Suit Summer

What is so fair—and so practical—as a suit in summer, especially one designed to make the wearer look like a fashion plate? For both smartness and long range economy, a summer suit is the answer to feminine clothes problems. It can be worn all day in town and readily takes to week-end jaunts. The one shown here is impeccably tailored in crush resistant, fine waledin weight koda rep containing Eastman acetate rayon. Note the long jacket with "natural" shoulders and smooth tapering lines, A polka dot contrasting blouse is attached to the four-gore skirt.

Exercises Make Girdle Unnecessary

By Ida Jean Kain

THE BEST starter for a daily dozen is a deadline. In just a few weeks, summer will be officially here and you will want to go without your girdle. You can, provided you begin today to exercise for 10 minutes every day.

Pay no attention to the argument that leaving off your girdle will cause you to spread. It is true that a girdle affords mechanical support for the organs. The weight of the organs against weak muscles would naturally make you spread. But you can strengthen your muscles until they will hold you as flat as a crepe suzette!

To avoid the possibility of any strain, the beginning exercises—and particularly those taken by the heavyweights—should be performed in a lying-down position on the floor. Here is my favorite system for strengthening these muscles.

POSITION: Lie on the back on the floor with arms down at sides, knees flexed and feet on the floor.

MOVEMENT: Contract the abdominal muscles and force the small of the back down against the floor. Hold for a second, slowly release, and repeat ten times.

Reax, then from the same position, flex alternate knees to the chest. Aways keep the abdominal muscles pulled up and in as you flex the knees toward the chest. Begin with ten counts and very gradually increase to 20.

Try to Relax Completely

Between exercises, try to relax completely—this is as important as the exercise itself!

POSITION: Same, on back on floor with knees flexed and feet on floor.

MOVEMENT: Holding knees together, twist at the waist, point knees down hard, and bring alternate thighs to rest on floor. Repeat five times on each side.

SAME POSITION.

MOVEMENT: Stretch your midriff by raising hips off floor until your body is in a straight line from chest to knees, and pull with all your waistline muscles. The object is to stretch through the waist, not to arc your back—that only gives you sway back. Do not raise the hips beyond the point at which your body is in a straight line. Lower hips to floor, rest and repeat as many times as you like.

Rest again, then roll over, face downward on the floor, and try this:

Reach back with both hands, flexing knees and holding feet up over hips. Grasp ankles with hands and p-u-l-l. When you get so you can do this with ease, rock back and forth across the abdomen while holding the position, then rock from side to side. That is guaranteed to give you a flat facade.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 18, Spends Sleepless Nights Because Boy She Loves Is Spiteful in Speech, Fickle in Attitude and Rude in Manner; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18 and have a deep affection for a boy of 19. We have known each other for nine months and the second time I saw him, I fell in love with him. He has a terrible habit of saying mean and hateful things to me and my friends. I become angry with him for a while and then forgive him. My friends think I am crazy to do it, but I am so much in love with him that I can't help myself.

For some reason, he doesn't care to meet my family, and he refuses to come to the door to meet me, when we are going out together, which we have been doing three or four times a week. I know he likes me a lot, but I can't get him to admit it, although one of his friends told me he is so much in love with me that he is "going in circles."

Sometimes he seems jealous of me and I can't hide my jealousy of him. Twice I became angry with him and told him not to come to see me again, but he continued to come anyway, and I continued to forgive him. Now he has met a girl of 15 and he constantly brags of her. He came by my house last night with a group of our mutual friends,—including one girl and six other boys. I didn't go out with them because I wanted your advice before seeing him again.

I am at the point now where I am spending many sleepless nights, thinking about him and trying to figure out what is best to I know I can't forget him and I am eager to fight for him, if necessary. But do you think I should try to win him away from rivals? —or should I break off with him? Your immediate reply with be appreciated. Sincerely,

J. M. F.

An Unfit Associate, Of Unstable Character

DEAR J. M. F.: There seems to something seriously wrong with the personality,—if not, indeed, the character,—of this young man. His refusal to present himself at your door is unquestionably tied up with his disinclination to meet your parents,—and his aversion to facing them smacks, to me, of a guilty conscience. It suggests that he knows himself to be something of a rotter, with only "strictly dishonorable" intentions toward you,—which would explain why he cringes from the prospect of an X-ray inspection by shrewdly appraising parental eyes.

Maybe he has already involved you in rather cheap behavoir,—by sensually exploiting your "deep affection" for him, while meanly denying you any assurance of a comparably clean minded devotion to you. In any event, his "terrible habit of saying mean and hateful things to you and your friends," plus his vulgar intimations of romantic interest in the 15-year-old girl, plus his rowdy conduct in stopping by your home "last night" in the company of a miniature mob,—give reason to believe (without further evidence or investigation) that he is no fit associate for you: much less sweetheart or lifetime partner.

Those sleepless nights you are spending, wondering "what is best to do," mean that your intellect and your emotions are in conflict over him. Your good taste, your common sense, your previously respected standard of values,—all these weigh him and find him wanting. You know he doesn't measure up, in character, temperamnt or conduct, to the sort of man you can trust, admire and care for wholeheartedly.

But, for the time being, you are crazily infatuated with him,—to the point, I suppose, of having to fight hard to keep from, literally, "making a fool of yourself" over him. A fool, as you know, is a "dupe," or "one easily deceived." And it appears you are tempted to deceive yourself into thinking the best of him, when reason and instinct (as well as his general deportment) tell you that he is,—for you, at least,—a demoralizing influence in every way.

Plainly, he isn't worth striving for. He is a bad mannered, cruel, unstable, offensively egoistic youngster,—who may be the victim of an unfortunate home background; but who hasn't, as yet, the saving grace to realize his shortcomings and want to correct them. On the contrary, it seems he would find malicious pleasure in visiting upon any girl who might care for him, the taint of unwholesomeness that makes him a bad actor.

My advice to you is to break off with him,—as the one and only means of lifting yourself by the bootstraps from the Slough of Despond into which he has brought you. As your friends have already told you,—you are "crazy" to go on taking his punishment and forgiving him for it. For one thing, you cannot afford to let him break your spirit, —as I imagine he would tauntingly do, if he could. And for another thing, any person who would, deliberately or senselessly, trample another's spirit, is intrinsically an evil personality,—who must be self-protectively avoided by all healthy persons interested in maintaining their psychic health.

M. H.

Wool Curtains, New Device of Actress

Ever thought of using wool for your curtains? Anna Lee did, and the effect is wonderful. When this young English star recently furnished an old Colonial style house in Beverly Hills (she says the Colonial makes her feel right at home), she decided on green and white for the sunroom. The curtains are natural wool, the coarse threads woven so loosely the sun comes through, in a sort of diffused light.

Curtains are printed with a leaf pattern, worked out in two shades of soft green. The windows are long, extending to the floor, so the curtains are, of necessity, the same length.

Cleansing Cream Good for Most Types of Skin

Do you always use cream for cleansing Or do you use soap and water? Or are you so confused by the conflicting advice of both the soap and cream addicts that you can't make up your mind which is best? Your cleansing method depends entirely upon the condition of your skin. If it's very oily, you should always use soap and water. If it's very dry, use cream. Since most of us have neither an excessively dry or oily condition, but rather a tendency to one or the other, the question of soap or cream is no problem; we can use both. When your skin feels dry, wash it first with soap and water; follow with a cream cleansing. When your skin seems to be on the oily side, reverse the process. So—unless your skin is very oily—you'll be using cream at one time or another. Here is the essential procedure for good cream-cleansing.

First wipe off lipstick. Put blob of cream on each eyelid and stroke it down over lashes. Remove with tissue, open eyes and gently remove mascara and cream fro munder eyes.

Place dabs of cream between eyes, on nose, and around mouth. From these central points spread cream over skin.

Beginning at base of neck, smooth cream upward and outward with many quick light strokes and little pressure.

The chin is often a dirt cache; give it special attention. Make little circles with fingertips so cream will get down after the dirt.

The base of nostril is a spot where make-up and dirt can accumulate. Be thorough when you clean this spot.

Whisk cream from skin lightly with tissue. Never dig it off. Repeat same upward, outward strokes and don't stint on tissues. Never pull down on skin.

Get Copy of Monroe Doctrine

A VITAL ISSUE in the news, the Monroe Doctrine! By daily word and act the United States of 1941 is reaffirming the policy first stated by Monroe in 1823—that we would consider any attempt of foreign powers to "extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety."

Not a law, the Monroe Doctrine was a plain statement of America's foreign policy—delivered by President Monroe during the course of a message to Congress.

At that time Spain's South American colonies had just won their independence. But could they keep it? News came that Europe's dictators planned to crush the new republics.

Monroe took this opportunity to state the policy: Hands off the Americas! Today, with a world-wide struggle raging, the Monroe Doctrine is of vital interest to all Americans.

A handsome copy of Monroe's historic statement is now available to you for framing. Our set, HISTORY-MAKING AMERICAN DOCUMENTS, includes the most vital point in the Monroe Doctrine, the Declaration of Independence in Jefferson's own handwriting and in the official signed version, also a copy of the Mayflower compact with the names of signers. Printed on cream antique paper. Includes histories of documents.

Send 15c in coins for our set, HISTORY-MAKING AMERICAN DOCUMENTS, to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of set.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Cheese Rollettes, Corn Ring Distinctive Food

A PLEASANT preface to an afternoon of friendly chatting is an informal luncheon. Certainly luncheon parties are a woman's world, and when given in the home can be events of distinction and charm.

I was a guest at a luncheon for a visiting guest recently at the home of Mrs. Alexander George, where good food and sparkling conversation made up a luncheon that I remember with haunting pleasure. I didn't come away with a record of the conversation but in the fashion of grandmother's day, I did come away with several recipes of dishes served.

Each dish that was served, from the Shrimp Tomato Savory to the Individual Caramel Pies, was something to remember. Here is the menu and recipes for the Cheese Rollettes and Corn Ring with Creamed Mushrooms:

Luncheon Menu

Shrimp Tomato Savory
Cheese Rollettes
Sliced Smoked Turkey
Corn Ring With Creamed Mushrooms
Tossed Green Salad, Celery Seed Dressing
Sliced Peaches Hot Rolls
Individual Caramel Pies
Meringue Covered Coffee

The Cheese Rollettes are just that bit needed to accompany a savory like the shrimp-tomato one served. Here is Mrs. George's recipe:

Cheese Rollettes—Peel 1 garlic clove and stick into 1 package of zippy cheese for 10 minutes. To the cheese add ¼ teaspoon each of minced green peppers, minced parsley and minced celery, 1 teaspoon minced olives, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon mayonnaise, ¼ teaspoon paprika and a dash of salt. Mix until soft with a fork. Chill. Cut fresh white bread into thin slices, discarding the crusts. Spread to edges with cheese mixture left 10 minutes in room to soften. Roll up tightly and wrap each 4 rolls together in waxed paper to hold shapes. Place in damp cloth and chill until serving time. These will keep for hours. Cut in thin slices or serve whole, broil or toast until well browned and serve while hot. These rollettes are also good to serve hot with soups, salads and cocktails. Serves six.

The Corn Ring was as attractive as it was delicious. The recipe for making it follows:

Corn Ring—Melt 3 tablespoons butter and add 4 tablespoons flour to it. When blended add 1½ cups milk and cook until creamy sauce forms. Stir constantly. Add ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon celery salt, 2 tablespoons minced pimiento, 2 cups whole kernel corn, and 3 beaten eggs and beat all for 1 minute. Add 2-3 cup soft bread cubes. Let stand 5 minutes to soften bread, and pour into buttered ring mold. Bake 30 minutes in pan of hot water in 325 degree oven. Let stand five minutes in hot place, unmold. Fill and surround with creamed mushrooms and garnish with parsley or watercress. Serves six.

Some Helpful Hints FOR TELEPHONE USERS

In the rush of business, domestic and social duties, the simple little things which must be done to get the most satisfactory telephone service are sometimes forgotten. The hints given below are not new—they are just reminders:

CONSULT DIRECTORY

Memory is often faulty. Look up the number when in doubt.

IF YOU WOULD BE UNDERSTOOD

Keep your lips about one inch from the mouthpiece and speak directly into it, clearly and naturally. Chewing gum, pencils, cigars, pipes and cigarettes make it almost impossible for your words to flow clearly into the transmitter.

LISTEN FOR DIAL TONE

If you start dialing a number before you hear the dial tone (a steady humming sound) your call cannot go through.

WHEN ANSWERING

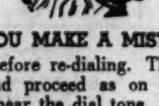
Always answer pleasantly. It may be your best friend. It may be someone who will get a lasting impression of you from a first call.

DIAL CAREFULLY

Dial the first two letters only of exchange name and then each digit of the number, carrying the dial around to the stop with your finger. Allow it to return naturally.

PAD AND PENCIL

You'll save time and steps and have a written record of important messages if you keep a pad and pencil by the telephone.



IF YOU MAKE A MISTAKE

Hang up before re-dialing. Then lift the receiver and proceed as on a new call when you hear the dial tone.

BE SLOW—BE FAST

Be slow to hang up. Give the person you're calling time to answer. A good plan is to count the rings. Ten rings equal a minute. Be fast to answer when your telephone rings. The person calling you will appreciate it.

HANG UP GENTLY AND CAREFULLY

It may annoy the person at the other end of the line if you hang up roughly. Also, if your receiver doesn't rest properly on the hook, people who call you will get a "busy" until this condition is corrected.

There's always time to use the telephone properly and to keep a smile in your voice.

Stirling Cites 3 Ways U.S. Can Be Drawn In

By Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr.
(U. S. N. Retired)
United Press Naval Critic

There are three possible moves by Hitler which might tend to bring the United States actively into the war.

One would be his announced intention of sinking American ships on sight if they venture into the Red Sea to aid Britain in the Near East.

President Roosevelt has proclaimed the Red Sea a noncombat zone into which American merchant ships may go, and Hitler retorted by creating a new war zone from the Gulf of Suez 450 miles into the Indian Ocean, in which American shipping would be legitimate prey.

Danger thus would arise if the United States Government carries out its intention of sending ships around the Cape of Good Hope into the Red Sea, to unload supplies for the British there and then go back to the United States by way of the East Indies to pick up return cargoes of tin, rubber and other vital commodities.

Dakar Presents a Poser

A second danger of United States involvement would be a Nazi assault on Gibraltar through Spain and thence across to Africa, with the connivance of the Vichy government, to occupy Dakar in Senegal.

The latter is the nearest point to South America, and suggestions have been made unofficially in Washington that we should occupy it for protection.

Hitler likewise might seize Lisbon to capture with German submarines the Azores, Cape Verde and Canary Islands, from which to operate against Britain's far-extended lines of communication. Both Dakar and the Atlantic Islands, in German hands, would be a potential menace to this country, and perhaps one which would lead us to retake them and safeguard the security of this hemisphere.

The third and perhaps most likely development which could bring this country into the war is the operation of Nazi submarines and airplanes against our defense efforts in the Battle of the Atlantic. There is considerable argument that, if Britain is to win, the United States must assume convoy duty and take measures to combat the sea menace actively.

Burning Question

This country is being flooded with figures showing shipping losses during a year and a half of the war. Some say the figures are exaggerated for propaganda purposes. Still, the menace to Britain is undeniably real.

A total of 1,508 ships of 6,127,673 tons, an average of 306,384 tons a month, is said to have been sunk. But what America wishes to know is what is happening now, and what has happened in the last few months since Hitler speeded up his submarine construction.

In March, 119 ships of 489,229 tons were sunk, according to apparently reliable British figures, and in April, 187,054 tons were sunk in the British evacuation of Greece. However, Britain cannot minimize the losses in Greece, for all losses, no matter where, reduce merchant shipping and act to curtail the vital food supply and munitions carrying capacity. The figures are alarming, with respect to America's aid to Britain.

Decision Due Soon

A recent Nazi report—they are not always reliable—stated that submarines followed a convoy in the Atlantic for two days and took a toll of 13 ships of 76,248 tons. When submarines can follow a convoy, said to be strongly protected by destroyers, and take such a toll, it is evident that Britain must do something more in the way of protection if her shipping is not to be depleted beyond the minimum limit of safety to the British Isles.

The British insist that the additional protection will have to come from this country. That is the nub of the argument over here, and a matter which the people and Congress will decide, probably very soon.

Proponents of direct American aid do not contend that American destroyers and airplanes would do any better than the British, but at least that they would increase protection for convoys and take a heavier toll of German submarines.

Three Columnists Maligned Senator, His Widow Says

By the United Press

Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, widow of the Minnesota Senator, accused three newspaper columnist last night of falsely challenging the integrity and patriotism of her husband.

In an unprecedented radio address, Mrs. Lundeen charged that Walter Winchell, syndicated columnist, had cruelly slandered her husband after his death by repeatedly suggesting that the Senator was not a loyal American.

"This statement is malicious and atrociously false," she said.

She said that Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, authors of the column "Washington Merry-Go-Round," had cooperated with Winchell in "spreading these libels." She vigorously denied a Pearson-Allen assertion that two Department of Justice agents were on the plane with Lundeen when it crashed and carried him to death, and that they had been assigned to "watch him."

Guns Must Greet Next Parachutists, Briton Declares

London, May 18 (AP).—A. P. Herbert member of Parliament, told the United Kingdom today in a speech salted with grim witticisms that "the next enemies arriving by parachute must not be met with peasants with pitchforks—undaunted in their underclothes."

He was referring to the Scotch plowman David McLean's capture of Rudolf Hess on a moor outside Glasgow a week ago last Saturday.

"They must—I believe they will—be received and repelled by trained troops fully equipped and ready," Herbert said in his broadcast.

"One day it may be these islands will shake to an unprecedented thud as Reichmarshal Goering—a parachute at each corner—settles on and perhaps submerges the Isle of Wight or Skye. . .

"One day perhaps a less expansive but more important parachute will gently deliver to the peace and safety of this 'effete democracy' a scrubby little fugitive from the soldiers and sheriffs of all nations. And then we may all sit back for a bit."

D. C. Catholics Join in Observing Biblical Sunday

The significance of the revised Catholic New Testament was emphasized at masses here yesterday, as Catholic Biblical Sunday was celebrated throughout the Nation.

Although no formal announcement of the observance was issued by Archdiocesan officials, most priests called attention to the occasion in sermons. The day marked the introduction of the revised version, the first revision of the Catholic Bible in 192 years.

Catholic officials explained yesterday that some Archdioceses may hold individual celebrations at a later date. The distribution of the new version is being handled through the National New Testament Committee of the Holy Name Society.

The revision was prepared under the direction of the Episcopal Committee on the Confraternity of the Christian Doctrine, with the aid of scholars from Catholic University and other places.

Truce Reached In Anthracite Negotiations

By the Associated Press

New York, May 18.—A tentative wage-hour agreement was reached today by the subcommittees of the anthracite operators and United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.), which conferees felt might permit resumption of work on Tuesday after a one-day stoppage.

A stoppage in the Pennsylvania hard coal fields, effective tomorrow and affecting 91,000 men, was ordered Saturday by the U. M. W. after negotiators had been unable to reach agreement and had three times extended the contract which expired April 31.

The agreement reached today will be submitted to the larger negotiating committee tonight and the subcommittees will then meet at 10 a. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow, possibly for official approval of a contract. The mines will be closed tomorrow.

Mines to Be Kept Open

The tentative agreement came a day after a threatened work stoppage in the soft coal fields was averted through the intervention of William H. Davis, vice chairman of the National Defense Mediation Board.

Davis announced late Saturday night he had obtained assurance from representatives of the U. M. W. and Southern Appalachian operators that the soft coal mines would be kept open pending further negotiations.

The soft coal negotiators agreed to continue their sessions in New York and to appear before the Defense Mediation Board in Washington at 10 a. m. (E. S. T.) Friday if they failed to agree by that time.

Wage Rise Asked

After today's midafternoon meeting between the hard coal operators and the union, Maj. W. W. Inglis, president of the Glen-Alden Coal Co., of Scranton, Pa., and conference chairman, issued this statement:

"A tentative agreement is under consideration upon which both sides will consult their associates. The conferees feel confident that an agreement will be consummated on Monday, when a joint meeting of miners and operators will convene."

John L. Lewis, U. M. W. president, asked if the miners might not return to work tomorrow under the tentative agreement, said "we simply cannot get word to them to go back" by tomorrow.

Terms of the tentative agreement were not disclosed. The union had asked a $1 a day increase in the basic $4.62 daily wage and a 20 per cent increase in the pay of contract workers.

The soft coal operators and the miners will resume their negotiations at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow in an effort to resolve a deadlock over a 40-cent wage differential between the Northern and Southern fields.

Machines to Tally Montgomery Vote

Seventy-one voting machines will be used in Montgomery County at the special election on May 27, when a successor to the late Representative William D. Byron will be chosen to serve out his unexpired term.

At the election last fall, 118 of the devices were used, but at the approaching election there will be but two candidates. They will be Mrs. Katharine E. Byron, widow of the Representative, who is the Democratic nominee, and A. Charles Stewart, the Republican candidate.

Week's Dizzy Doings Include Hostess Application for Bomber

By Gladwin Hill

New York, May 18 (The Special News Service).—Interesting people?

A baffling brigade of them popped up in this week's Screwy News Sweepstakes. Step right up and meet the 8-year-old motorist, the man who dreamed himself a shot in the leg, the man who finally discovered a successful alibi for passing a red light . . .

Here's the line-up:

An unidentified citizen of White Plains, N. Y.: He streamlined the blitzkrieg against yowling alley cats and put the battle on a factory-to-you basis by bombarding a frolicking feline with a brand new alarm clock, still in its package.

Cal Waggoner, of Decatur, Ill.: For the 35th successive year, he bet friends it would rain on May 10—and won.

John Workman, of Kansas City: Dreaming he was in a terrific fight, he reached under his pillow for his pistol—and shot himself in the leg.

Donald Kobs, of Minneapolis, aged 8: When his father wasn't looking, he swiped the family car, drove it 10 miles, went into a ditch, and called a repair car!

An unidentified New York girl: she volunteered for service as "hostess on a United States Army bomber".

Miss Martha Fowler of Salisbury, N. C: stricken with appendicitis just before her wedding, she was married in a hospital bed, in her wedding gown;

Philip Schmidt of San Francisco: pinched for passing a red light, he explained that his pet seal in the back of the car had broken loose and swarmed all over him, distracting his attention—and he was acquitted;

A hen in Berlin, Md.: given 12 eggs to hatch, she turned up three days later with a brood of six kittens; (Don't ask us how it's done—mirrors, probably);

A hen in Empire, Ga.: she laid an egg in the front seat of a parked car and honked the horn until she attracted somebody's attention;

And, ultimately, we have the unidentified humorist in Dallas who dashed into a hospital emergency ward, clutching his stomach—and asked them to sew on a suspender button for him.

The Federal Diary

Cabinet Heads Study Decentralization Plan

The plan to decentralize the Federal Government is beginning to take shape. Decentralization is understood to have been discussed at a recent Cabinet meeting and since that time several Cabinet members have instituted studies to determine what bureaus, if any, could be moved out of the city. To the surprise of the Cabinet members it's reported that several bureau chiefs offered to move all or parts of their agencies to the field. None of the volunteer agencies has been mentioned in connection with decentralization. It would take two months, officials say, to move an agency out of here and get it settled in another city. The fight for space to house expanding defense agencies is becoming more pressing daily and it's generally expected that something will be made public soon on the agency or agencies to be transferred.

Decentralization or not, Civil Service Commission experts foresee a steady rise in the number of Federal employes in Washington. It's estimated that roughly 225,000 new employes will be hired by Uncle Sam during the 1942 fiscal year that will start on July 1. About 10 per cent of that number will be hired here, past records indicate. There are at least 165,000 departmental employes here now and Civil Service officials expect the number to be near 200,000 during the 1942 fiscal year. Counting Navy Yard and other Federal workers here, classified as "field," the number now is believed to be more than 190,000.

A new stenographer-typist test was announced today by the Civil Service Commission. It is for junior stenographer, $1,440 entrance salary, and junior typist, $1,260 entrance salary. The test is open to both men and women. The closing date is June 9. It will be a straight practical test. The general mental test has been dropped in an effort to round up more stenographers and typists who will work for Uncle Sam. More than 30,000 passed a similar test given only a few months ago, but the number of eligibles who refused to take jobs here was enormous.

It's customary for the commission to cancel the old register of eligibles when a new test is given and a new register is established. However, the need for stenographers and typists is so great that the old register will be kept alive. It's probable that hundreds of persons who apply for this test will be given jobs subject to passing the test. Stenographers and typists are just that scarce. The test unquestionably will be taken by employes whose jobs will be brought under merit by the Ramspeck Act to secure a Civil Service rating, which would exempt them from non-competitive mental tests under the Ramspeck Act.

A new application form will be used by applicants for the stenographer-typist exam. For the first time applicants won't have to list traffic offenses involving fines of $25 or less. The new form will enable the commission to speed up its examining procedure and establish the register within a few weeks after an exam is given. Past records show that between 10,000 and 15,000 will take the test here.

An English Army officer told War Undersecretary Robert Patterson that what impressed him most in America was the number of conventions going on in Washington. . . . Clarence A. Patterson has been appointed general counsel of Farm Credit in Baltimore. . . . Farm Credit will give its annual party Friday at Manor Country Club. . . . A healthy scrap is going on over the appointment of the nine lawyers who will make up the board to select Federal attorneys.

James P. Wilson, an Agriculture economist who has recently returned from Europe, tells how the Danish government has been adjusting the salaries of its employes to meet rising living costs. On April 1, he said, all Danish government employes were granted increases in their cost of living allowances ranging from 5 to 22 per cent of their salaries. Men with families received proportionately more than single men and high paid employes were given proportionately less than low-paid workers. The average increase, he said, was about 10 per cent. If Leon Henderson fails to control prices our Government may have to follow suit.

Whoa, That's Speeding

Two Fourth Precinct policemen were called forth yesterday to stop speeders in the 400 block of H Street Southwest. They caught their quarry at Seventh and H—two youths astride two nags from a riding stable. The youths said it was exercise. The horses looked as though it had been a race.

—And It Shall Be Opened

Members of St. Paul's Methodist Church chuckled yesterday morning as their broad-shouldered former college football player pastor, the Rev. Charles F. Phillips, described how he recently "went right through that door" when accidentally locked in a small closet at his home. He told the story to illustrate a sermon point.

Church School Dedicated At Bethesda

Crown Princess Martha of Norway was among the more than 350 worshipers who yesterday heard the Rev. Henry J. Whiting lauded as the man who launched the Christ Lutheran Church of Bethesda from scratch during the depression.

The occasion was the dedication of the new $10,000 church school addition to the church building on Old Georgetown Road. The Crown Princess, who is of the Lutheran faith, lives at Pookes Hill, near Bethesda.

The Rev. Raymond P. Vogeley, pastor of Christ Church, in leading a testimonial to the Rev. Mr. Whiting, announced that a children's chapel would soon be dedicated in his honor. It will be known as the Henry J. Whiting Chapel. The Rev. Mr. Whiting is now assistant superintendent of the Baltimore Lutheran Inner Mission Society.

The Rev. Edward Goetz, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church of Washington and past president of the Washington Lutheran Ministerial Association, joined in the tribute to the Rev. Mr. Whiting, who served as liturgist and brought greetings during the afternoon program.

Principal speaker during the afternoon was Dr. Ralph Long, New York City, executive director of the National Council. He said that the glory of the church is not just in buildings or ritual but in the spirit of Christ in the lives of men and women. Dr. G. E. Lenski, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, Washington, also participated.

The Rev. E. H. Meuser, executive director of the board of home missions, the American Lutheran Church, spoke during the morning. Dedication week program will include an Ascension Day musical service on Thursday at 8 p. m. and a fellowship function on Friday at 8 p. m.

D. C. Court Opens Alien Propaganda Test Case Today

The first court test of the McCormack Act, designed by Congress to force propaganda agents of foreign governments or other foreign principals to register with the Secretary of State, opens here today in the United States District Court with three American citizens as defendants.

The case hinges upon the alleged activities of Amtorg, a Soviet agency; Mezhkniga, official Soviet publishing house in Moscow, and the Bookniga Corporation of New York State. Raphael Rush and Morris Liskin, president and vice president, respectively, of Bookniga Corporation, are the naturalized American defendants, and Norman Weinberg, the secretary-treasurer, was American born. Violations of the McCormack Act are punishable by fines up to $1,000 and imprisonment up to a maximum of two years.

The defendants were indicted not only for failure to register, but with organizing the Bookniga Corporation "for sale and distribution in the United States of books, magazines, periodicals and pamphlets of a political and propagandist nature, and for political and propaganda purposes."

Draft to Be Kind To Animal Doctors

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, May 18.—Antarctic explorers who arrived here today aboard the barkentine Bear revealed how a Washington flier and his companion rescued 28 members of the expedition in a patched-up airplane.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, commander of the expedition, who gave the returning men a hero's welcome, announced that he will recommend that the Navy award the two fliers citations for skill and bravery. The aviators are Chief Petty Officer Ashley C. Snow, of 1901 B Street Northeast, and Radioman (First Class) Earl B. Perce, of San Diego, Calif.

The fliers made two hazardous trips to evacuate 28 explorers from the expedition's ice-locked east base to mountainous Mikelson Island, from which the men and supplies were lowered to whaleboats and transferred to the barkentine, flagship of the expedition. The plane was abandoned.

Snow and Perce were among the 22 men who returned to the United States aboard the 70-year-old square-rigger. Others returned May 5 on the motorship North Star. The expedition strengthened United States claims to 1,000,000 square miles of Antarctic territory.

Cappel Honored For Aid to Music

C. C. Cappel, manager of the United States Marine Band who recently resigned managership of the National Symphony Orchestra, has received a citation for his services to American music from the National Association for American Composers and Conductors. The award was announced here following the association's annual reception Friday night in New York.

The association, of which Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, prominent writer on music, is president, commended Cappel for encouraging, as a manager, the performance of American works, for personally interviewing composers, "thus stimulating the creation of American music," and for the giving of "all-American programs in all parts of the United States" by the organizations under his management.

Cappel was instrumental in arranging the all-American program featured by the Marine Band on its tour of 19 States last season.

Boy, Awarded 2 Scholarships, Can't Decide

What boy of 14 wouldn't be in a quandary after winning two full scholarships, one to St. John's College and another to Gonzaga College High School?

BERNARD

Bernard R. Ihrie, 420 Farragut Street Northwest, a student at St. Gabriel's School, just couldn't make up his mind yesterday after Father Francis E. Garner, headmaster of Gonzaga, had announced that he was one of four full scholarship recipients. St. John's College last week awared him first prize in its scholarship competition. Nor would his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Ihrie, attempt to influence his decision.

Mrs. Ihrie merely said that winning two full scholarships was "beyond our dreams." A sergeant in the Fire Department, Mr. Ihrie said, "I think he's wonderful. I wish I had his brains."

All Bernard, who intends to study medicine, would say is, "I don't know which school I'll go to," and, "Gosh, I'm so happy I don't know what to say."

In addition to the four full winners, there are twelve half scholarship winners, all of whom were selected from 245 boys who took an examination in mathematics and English at Gonzaga on Saturday afternoon.

Another full scholarship winner, Paul Cotton, 1410 Quincy Street Northwest, of Sacred Heart Parish, was winner of a half scholarship at St. John's.

Other full scholarship winners are Charles Eugene Edwards, 431 Longfellow Street Northwest, of Nativity School and David H. McCabe, of 6124 Thirty-third Street Northwest, of Blessed Sacrament.

Half scholarship winners are: Bernard Ostman, Burnt Mills Hills, Silver Spring, St. Michaels; John Lertora, 1613 D Street Southeast, Holy Comforter; Edward T. Smith, 66 Bates Street Northwest, St. Aloysius; Leo Weisgerber, 3502 Sixteenth Northeast, St. Aloysius; Pietro Santucci, 1422 North Capitol Street, St. Aloysius; George Garvey, 3505 Patterson Street Northwest, Blessed Sacrament; James Burke, 10 Cecil Avenue, Hyattsville, Holy Redeemer; Richard Bloomfield, 5329 Reno Road, Blessed Sacrament; George Mickum, 1308 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, St. Cecelia; Joseph Hogan, 433 Oglepthorpe Street Northwest, Nativity School; Theodore Reidy, 5513 Broad Branch Road, Blessed Sacrament, and Paul Coughlin, 8817 First Avenue, Silver Spring, St. Michael's.

Army Will Need 2,451 New Nurses, Red Cross Reports

By the Associated Press

The Red Cross reported yesterday that the Army would need 2,451 additional nurses by July 1, and appealed to all nurses qualified for military service to make known their availability.

Miss Mary Beard, director of the Red Cross nursing service, said the Army hoped to induct 4,624 additional nurses by December 1, and that the Navy also was expected to increase its corps of nurses materially.

Predicting that the armed services would have no difficulty in obtaining needed nurses, Miss Beard said the Red Cross first reserve of nurses, official reservoir of nursing strength for the Army and Navy, now totaled about 24,000. From this group, 2,478 were on active duty with the Army on May 1. The Army also has 1,135 regular nurses.

250 New Selects Bring Regiment Up to War Quota At Fort Meade

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 18.—The 115th Infantry, commanded by Col. D. John Markey, paraded its war-time strength of 2,669 men this afternoon before the largest "week-end at home" crowd since the Twenty-ninth Division encamped for its year of military service.

Just yesterday the regiment reached its full strength when 250 selectees arrived from the New Cumberland, Pa., reception center. Despite their less than 24-hour stay in camp, they participated in the parade that saw the regiment at its full strength for the first time since the first World War.

All the might the regiment possessed was displayed before a crowd estimated at close to 10,000 persons who crowded the boundaries of the parade ground west of Division Hill.

Residents from all sections of Maryland and from neighboring Pennsylvania, District of Columbia and Virginia were present for the show which the famous "Fighting First" put on for admirers as part of the division's program to have each regiment host in camp over a week-end.

The infantrymen and their equipment took almost half an hour to pass the reviewing stand. The three battalions, the unlettered companies and the entire complement of selects passed the stand in normal formation the first time around.

On their second march past, the First Battalion marched in massed formation with fixed bayonets, the Third Battalion passed wearing gas masks, motor equipment passed in columns of two and firing machine guns of the heavy weapons units chattered a noisy farewell salute from their motorized mounts.

The regiment was reviewed by Col. Markey and his staff and by Brig. Gen. Dwight H. Mohr, commanding Maryland's recently created Home Guard.

Visitors began to jam the regimental area early this morning as soldiers of the various companies returned from weekend leaves before 10 o'clock.

Activities got under way early with band concerts in the battalion areas at 9 o'clock, followed by a drum corps demonstration at 9:30 and regimental church services at 10:30.

Protestants worshiped in the grove west of regimental headquarters with Chaplain Frank Lambert conducting services. Those of the Catholic faith attended mass in the regimental recreational hall with Chaplain Eugene P. O'Grady officiating.

Shortly after noon, company inspection gave the visitors a brief insight into the training their friends and relatives are receiving under the Nation's national defense program.

The "At Home" weekend activities started yesterday afternoon with regimental athletic contests. Boxing bouts were held during the evening.

Dances last night for both officers and enlisted men provided something to do for those who were not fortunate enough to receive overnight leave or who elected to remain in camp.

Another brother, William Leo Dwyer, had his arm broken, and Barbara Jane Depuy, 17, of Gaithersburg, Md., was cut and bruised on the face and legs.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

No Rest for the Weary In Summer Outlook

Warners Flash Long List of 'Super-Dupers;' Al Jolson Has Eye on Two Capital Weeks; This, That and the Other About the Theater

MAYBE THERE IS some balm in Gilead. As it grows "very warm for May," as Max Gordon would put it, the responsibilities of the motion picture reviewers seem to grow lighter. One who, in an earlier incarnation, was accustomed to wrack what passed for his brain for some device by which a picture might be made to "stand up" for a week, finds himself at least a couple of gogs over the contemplation of a series of extended runs in the downtown movie mosques precisely as the "heated term" begins to set in.

BELL

"Fantasia," obviously, is in for a run at the National; "Citizen Kane" ought to be good for weeks on end, at RKO-Keith's, and there is nothing to give pause to the thought that "Meet John Doe" will go no less than two weeks at the Earle. It wasn't like that in those counterfeit "good old days." But it does take some of that pressure off the backs of the necks of the drama desks. That is to say it ordinarily would. Then comes the awakening. The Warner Brothers have seen to that. There will be no rest for the weary, although possibly a temporary respite.

What I mean is that the Earle Theater has rigged up a line of attractions that promise to keep this sorry craft as busy during the summer months as the proverbial bee, or even the bumble bee that went on that epochal musical flight.

"Million Dollar Baby," for example, will bring Priscilla Lane, Ronald Reagan and Jeffrey Lynn to Thirteenth Street on May 23, with a question mark. Irwin Shaw's "The Gentle People" will follow with Ida Lupino, John Garfield, Thomas Mitchell and Eddie Albert. Geraldine Fitzgerald and James Stephenson will be happening along as costars of "Shining Victory," she having done a gorgeous job of miming in "Dark Victory" and he in "The Letter"—both with Bette Davis, by the way. Bette Davis, herself, will demonstrate her gifts as a comedienne, with James Cagney costarred—and there is a combination for you—in "The Bride Came C. O. D." Jeffrey Lynn, Mona Maris and Kaaren Verne will have the leading roles in "Underground," a story with a Nazi background. "Manpower," with Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich and George Raft, may or may not reveal why Robinson and Raft feuded throughout its making. Gary Cooper will bring "Sergeant York" to the Earle screen and the Warners will unfurl their first Technicolor production of the year in "Dive-Bomber," costarring Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray. And that isn't all.

Columbia will come to bat at the corner of Thirteenth and E with "She Knew All the Answers"—and it is a good trick—co-starring Joan Bennett and Franchot Tone; Melvyn Douglas and Ruth Hussey in "Our Wife" and Robert Montgomery in "Heaven Can Wait." From Paramount will come Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray, in "One Night in Lisbon;" Mary Martin and Don Ameche, in Clare Boothe's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," and Cecil B. DeMille's Technicolor production of "Reap the Wild Wind." We should be looking forward to a period of loafing! We should be, but we're not.

So this seems as good a place as any to pick up that item that was crowded out of last Thursday's column, to wit:

Mr. Jolson Cooks Up a Plan

Had you been in the Mayflower Lounge last Monday night, as our former office associate Jean Brownell was, you might have run into Al Jolson, as she did. Mr. Jolson had flown into the Capital from the South, hesitated a moment or two and then flew out again for New York on Tuesday morning. He killed part of his Monday evening by going to the Archibald-Jeffra fisticuffing, instead of to "Fantasia." But the important thing is that he is reviving his recent Broadway hit, "Hold Onto Your Hats"—closed at the height of its New York popularity—for a road tour in the fall. Washington is one of the first cities he hopes to play and Al has it in the back of his mind that the piece ought to be booked into the National for two weeks instead of one. We hope he is right. The present plan rumbling around in the great "Mammy man's" skull is to reassemble the original New York cast, although there have been persistent rumors that when, as and if the business comes off, Cass Daley will be found in the Martha Raye role. I can think of no better substitution.

Dots and Dashes

Opening with "The Mountain Limited," on June 16, the Roadside Theater will present 14 weeks of entertainment out on the Rockville Pike—"Too Much Johnson," "Insured at Lloyds," "To Die at Dawn," "Tennessee's Pardner" and "Davy Crockett" are among the offerings announced. . . . The fourth production, for some reason is a secret. . . . Thanks to Harry H. Baker, prestidigitator extraordinary and District manager of the Wilson Line on the side, for the carte blanche for 1941. . . . Bill McGuire, remembered for his splendid performance in "Art and Prudence" last summer, will be the star of Father Hartke's next production, "Calidore," out at Catholic University. . . . Having launched "Fantasia," at the National, with aplomb, eclat, capacity crowds and all that sort of thing, Miss Antoinette Spitzer, high priestess of the night owls, Greenwich-Villaged over the weekend—probably easing her way uptown to add to the matutinal disturbances of upper Manhattan before the thing was over. . . . Sharma, making his first theatrical appearance with Sam Jack Kaufman's Orchestra at the Capitol this week, has solved the problem of the high-intensity microphones which he faced for the first time and is no longer the victim of unintentional fortissimos. . . . He is merely addicted to the artistic use of an exceptionally fine barytone voice.

Strain-on-the-Budget Note

This is the week when any judicious showshopper will visit at least four Washington theaters. No one can afford not to, if he wants to be "in the know."

G-Men Stars Of New Bill At Trans-Lux

While the news section of the current program at the Trans-Lux Theater is far above the average in interest, there can be no doubt that "Men of the F. B. I." the March of Time release, will hold more than average interest. Here is the first pictorial story, in detail, of just how Director J. Edgar Hoover's G-men accomplish the tremendous task of preventing espionage and sabotage.

The recent and intimate films of "This Man—Hess" are intelligently put together and give a brief but comprehensive history of this amazing personage.

Foreign highlights in the newsreels include views of the complicated London firefighting system; the British mop-up in East Africa; the bombing of Malta; the H.M.S. "Warspite," at Alexandria, after the battle of Matapan; the battering received by Plymouth, England; the King and Queen and Queen Mother, visiting soldiers, and splendid pictures of Churchill as he is cheered by Britishers in all sections of London.

From Singapore are pictures proving that this strategic British point in the Far East is well fortified and has an ample air force, including many U. S. planes. In Tokyo, U. S. Ambassador Grew speaks on U. S.-Japanese relations. A monster troop review is staged at Fort Lewis, Washington, while former King Carol and Mme. Lupescu arrive in Bermuda. Admirals of the South American republics visit the Brooklyn Navy Yard and Lakehurst, N. J., where a mass Marine 'chute jump was staged.

The sport section brings such thrillers as the California Rancheros in a pageant of horsemanship; a cyclist setting a 91-m. p. h. record; a toboggan handicap at Belmont Park, and Whirlaway winning the Preakness.

A cleverly arranged quiz short, "So You Think You Know Music," introduces Hendrik Willem Van Loon, Jessica Dragonette and Col. Stoopnagle.

Gayety

Pat Paree, a charming exponent of the dance, and funny I. B. Hamp are the stars of this week's gala attraction at the Gayety.

Whereas a number of her stage sisters merely parade or offer a song selection, Pat's routines are in a class by themselves. Appearing in several musical specialties, this talented and shapely siren entertains with dances which indicate real preparation and daring in their presentation.

I. B. Hamp, with the assistance of his clever partner, Gertie Beck, makes the comedy moments of the production tops in laughs. Hamp has several new and nifty "bits" along with a few of his old familiar scenes, all of which are different and funny. Harry Clexx also contributes some worthwhile comedy to the revue.

Blonde and lovely Diane Johnson, stunning Joan Mavis and the dark-eyed and clever Elsa Greenwell form a trio of temptresses who contribute much to the distaff portion of the entertainment.

Completing the cast are Al Blanc, who plays a harmonica exceptionally well; Bob Taylor, a clever and hard-working straight man, and Rue and Carroll, a boy and girl who give local patrons some of the finest acrobatic dancing ever seen at this house. ART JOHN.

otherwise, but not altering the left to right, the Andrews Sisters, favorites among the theater's singing comediennes, who have just signed again on the dotted line for Universal. Having only recently come out of "In the Navy," starring Abbott and Costello and Dick Powell, they will go next into "Oh, Charlie," also an Abbott and Costello starrer

Leonard Lyons:

New York, May 18.

THE NEXT MEMBER of the Washington inner circle going to London will be Leon Henderson, the price stabilizer. Henderson will go as soon as he can. . . . Paderewski, who returned to his New York hotel apartment recently, sighing: "This is my only home, and I'm glad to be back," has had a relapse. His illness is serious. . . . The Buchmanites have their explanation of Rudolf Hess' flight—that he was one of the leaders of the Buchman Moral Rearmament movement in Germany, and so was desirous of peace. . . . "A Yank in the R. A. F.," the movie now being produced by Darryl Zanuck, will be adapted into a novel—thereby reversing the usual process. Random House will publish it, and it will be written under the nom de plume, "Harlan Thomas."

LEONARD LYONS

ALEXANDER KIRKLAND, the actor-producer, wrote to Eleanor Roosevelt, expressing his appreciation for her commenting favorably upon a play in which he had a financial interest.. "The play needed a boost, just at the time you wrote those lines," was Kirkland's message.. "If, in my humble capacity, there ever is anything I can do for you I'll be at your service." Mrs. Roosevelt's response was an immediate one. Two days later she wrote to Kirkland, told him that his had been a dangerous offer—and asked him to help a young actress she knew get a job. . . . "If, amid the pressure of your position, you have the time and heart to worry about little people," Kirkland acknowledged, "I have the time and role for that young actress."

All the reports of Beatrice Lillie's return to America are premature. Bea will remain in England. Her son, Sir Robert Peel, is working aboard a battleship . . . Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, the former U. S. Minister to Norway, had two unusual experiences last week. She received the first copy of her new book, "Mission to the North," and took her four-week-old great-granddaughter, Florence Jaffray Lewis, for a ride on a Boston-to-New York plane . . . Jimmy Durante, now at Frisco's newest club Stairway to the Stars, will return to the New York scene next month . . . The new Crosby-Hope movie, "Road to Morocco"—about a sultan and his harem—was sold to Paramount by E. A. Ellington, who writes the most innocent, delicate soap-operas for radio.

IN THE COURT of General Sessions last week, Henry T. Wilson was being tried for a murder committed last December. It was a Harlem murder, in which the victim was slain by a Colt automatic. . . . After the jury had been selected, the defendant's lawyer turned to Wilson, noticed that his jacket was unbuttoned, and that his tie-clasp was showing. It was an unusual clasp which the lawyer ordered him to remove. The clasp was a miniature Colt automatic, similar to the one used in the murder. . . . Wilson was convicted.

BROADWAY'S first Block Party will be held next month, to raise funds for British ambulances. Forty-fifth Street, between Broadway and Eighth, will be roped off. An orchestra will play from the terrace of the Music Box Theater . . . Billy Seeman, head of the White Rose grocery products company—whose wife, Phyllis Haver, gave up her movie career when she married him—is going to Hollywood. He'll be technical adviser for the finale of Buddy de Sylva's "Birth of the Blues," which is set in a grocery store . . .

Elizabeth Arden, the beautician, hired Will Jason, who directs movie shorts for M-G-M, to direct a commercial film for her, in Technicolor. The Technicolor Corporation however, wouldn't permit the use of its film, unless an experienced producer would assume full responsibility to them. Miss Arden, therefore, created a special company—Will Jason Productions, Ltd.—to make this film, and Jason's title was changed to that of producer.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 18 (INS).—Looks as if Martha Raye and Universal will get together on a deal for Martha to play the role in "Hold On to Your Hat" she created on the stage. The funny girls are really coming back on the screen, and I don't mean the glamour girls who turned screwball. Judy Canova is a one-girl riot in "Sis Hopkins," and now that Martha is back in Hollywood, there's no reason why she shouldn't climb back to stardom again. The only reason I've ever figured out for her box office slip was that Carole Lombard, Claudette Colbert, Irene Dunne and other glamour girls almost pushed the comediennes out of the picture by turning comics during the screwball fad.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Martha and Neal Lang, who will be married any day now, expect to remain in Hollywood for several months—but Martha says she'll always take time off to do a stage stint. Interesting that Martha, who used to be sensitive about the size of her mouth, realizes it's an asset.

The luck of the Irish has nothing on the luck of Warners, who had a cameraman in San Diego, shooting backgrounds for "Dive Bomber" when Second Lieut. Walter S. Osipoff was brought to safety in one of the most spectacular mid-air rescues in aviation history. Osipoff dangled for 30 minutes from the wing of a parachute ship before Lieut. W. W. Lowrey and Chief Machinist's Mate J. R. McCants saved him. The Warners' ship was piloted by Frank Clark, with Winton Hawk at the camera. Will the Navy permit Warners to use those shots in "Dive Bomber"? If they do, you can bet Warners will incorporate them in their movie.

It keeps the story department at Twentieth Century-Fox busy hunting for musicals for their three blonde beauties, Alice Faye, Betty Grable and Carole Landis. Yes, Carole sings, too, and her next picture will be "Cadet Girl," in which she will be starred with a name band. Ray McCarey, who signed a new contract, is scheduled to direct. Ever since I have been writing about movies Ray has been known as Leo McCarey's brother. Now he stands shoulder to shoulder with brother Leo. Ray's promotion came after he had made a picture called "The Cowboy and the Blonde," a sleeper, if you know what I mean, and a picture which gave George Montgomery stardom and promoted Mary Beth Hughes' stock.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Mrs. Charles Bennett, wife of the well-known British writer, is on her way home to pilot planes between Canada and England; Arline Judge creating a sensation when she walked into the Mocambo with Robert Reynolds, tall, blond and handsome heir to a tobacco fortune; Franchot Tone and Faith Dorn, the young lady Howard Hughes admires, never missing a dance at the same place.

Jose Iturbi, at the Pirates Den with Rudy Vallee, staged an impromptu concert, and what a reception he received; Al Bloomingdale's party given at Paul Leviton's home, went on until dawn. Simone Simon was given an affectionate farewell by Bloomingdale when she went straight from the party to the train to leave for the Tulip Festival in Holland, Mich.; Marcelle Ruggles and Simone chatted in French; Nelson Eddy is cultivating a Russian accent for his role in "The Chocolate Soldier".

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 18.

Once in a while comes a story that makes me feel good all over.

Martha Cheavens, writer, was taken ill in New York about a year ago, and doctors decided a major operation was imperative. Her funds dwindling, she had her hopes on a story called "Penny Serenade," which her agent was endeavoring to sell to a studio, but time passed and her condition became steadily worse. Finally, despite her desperate protests, she was rushed to the hospital, where her agent managed to see her just before she went under the ether. "Everything is going to be all right!" he told her. "Your story is as good as sold. Now, don't worry about anything."

HOPPER

Martha went to sleep hugging that thought, but when, after more than two hours on the operating table, she regained consciousness, her courage once more failed. When her agent was ushered in, he found her weeping brokenly. "I thought my story was sold," she sobbed, "but it was only a dream." "A dream!" he yelled. "Well, then, just wake up and look at this!" And he showed her a wire from Hollywood, confirming the sale of her story for $25,000.

Poor Tay Garnett is certainly having his troubles. He was all set to use Martha Scott and Tommy Mitchell in his next picture when Tommy was injured. Now he has to wait for Charles Coburn, and can't get Martha because she's tied up with Sol Lesser. I told him about Ann Sothern's performance in "Lady Be Good," and he said Ann did one of the nicest things that ever happened to him. After he'd given her that comedy part in "Trade Winds," which brought her back after a year and a half absence, Ann rushed into his office, threw both arms around his neck, and said "Honey, you did it—I owe it all to you! I've just signed a contract with M-G-M!!!"

Clark Gable had a letter from London, written by Jack Doyle, who married Screen Star Movita. Seems they went through several blackouts, which put Movita in a hospital. She's out now. They're both entertaining the British soldiers . . . 'Tis said Uncle Sam is looking into the income tax reports of two top producers. Seems the more you make, the less you get . . . Good news!—Bill Jordan is back in town and plans to reopen his Bar of Music.

There's a new girl in "Tom, Dick and Harry" named Betty Breckinridge, who's married to the head of the American Academy in New York, and is a friend of Director Garson Kanin. She's a charming, wide-awake young actress, and has a very funny routine as a telephone operator who interrupts Ginger Rogers' speeches by saying, "When you hear the tone, the time will be four-forty-one and a quarter,"—and does that every 15 seconds. I don't think that a certain watch company will like it. Kanin, kidding Ginger, said, "Play this scene with gaiety, honey—I hear tell this is supposed to be a humorous picture!"

McCrea Will See Man About Cows

Joel McCrea has gone to New Mexico to see some men about some cows. Finished with his role in "The Great Man's Lady," he departed to confer about the purchase of cattle for his Ventura County ranch. Now that McCrea has enlarged his ranch from 1,000 to 1,500 acres through a recent purchase, he has grazing space for many more cattle.

By his long slender bill
You'll know the red-shouldered hawk;
He is not such a pill,
Despite all the bad things
That are said of his kind,
A la squawk.

An American ranger,
From border to border,
He's said not to bother the chickens;
So welcome here, stranger,
Step right up and order,

Sibley Hospital Class to Graduate Tomorrow

THE world expects more of a nurse, physician, or minister than technical skill, the Rev. Charles Phillips told the nurses' graduating class of Sibley Memorial Hospital yesterday.

He delivered the baccalaureate sermon in St. Paul's Methodist Church, Thirteenth and Crittenden Streets Northwest, at a morning service attended by the class, their friends and relatives, and members of the board of Sibley Hospital and faculty of the Lucy Webb Hayes National Training School of the hospital, which the nurses had attended.

SERVICE to their fellowmen as the basis of life, with God as their inspiration, was the factor in addition to skill that Mr. Phillips told the congregation was required of nurses. Among those who heard him, besides the nurses, were Dr. John M. Orem, president of the hospital; Mrs. Robert Stewart, secretary of hospitals for the women's division, Methodist Women's Society of Christian Service, and Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Baltimore Conference of the latter society. Others were Samuel McIntosh, president of the Methodist Union; Mrs. T. W. Stanton and Edwin Dice.

Mr. Phillips asked a special blessing for the nurses, whose graduation exercises will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest. At that time Bishop Adna Wright Leonard will speak.

Bill Cunningham's Column . . . Patriot's Sock Warms Collector's Heart

Two middle-sized workmen, Ken Overlin and Billy Soose, danced the bitter fandango on a New York battle pulpit the other night. The contention, as the boys say, went the distance, and the middleweight championship of the world—possibly a vast overstatement in these hours of bullet and bomb—changed hands, young Mr. Soose being ruled the new proprietor of that division, although many pundits in the press pews dissented.

Nobody was hurt very much. There was no bouncing around the deck, no spectacular freshets of carmine, no sudden pausing and peering by an anxious referee, followed by the time-honored cry, "Are they a doctor in the house?" Somehow, it set this journeyman wonderer to wondering just where the fine art of smacking a human being upon the potato, or chin, ceases to be art or business and becomes a miserable misdemeanor rewardable, not with cash, but in terms of a stall in the most convenient calaboose.

As it chances, your correspondent is a fancier of hard right-hand smacks to the kisser, and will even consider a good lefthanded smack if properly certified. You might call it a form of collecting.

Dating all the way back to that hot post-other war Jersey afternoon when the pallid poilu, France's Orchid Man, Georges Carpentier—now desperately trying to get out of Paris and back to this country, incidentally—rocked the young and solid Jack Dempsey to his veriest heel tacks with one all-out right that almost, but not quite, did the business, I've been collecting such optically, photographically and typographically in and from all parts of the earth.

Step over some time and I'll show you my collection, the terrific Schmeling right that knocked Bill Stribling out in Cleveland, the mighty Firpo swish that put Dempsey out on his shoulder blades amongst the typewriters, the lethal Louis smash that half turned Jim Braddock in the air and dropped him like a pole-axed steer in a pool of red as big as a scatter rug. But what I'm getting around to saying is this:

The most terrific right-hand blow I ever saw dent a human countenance was flung the other Sunday afternoon on historic Boston Common by a poorly dressed man who didn't look as if he had it in him.

Sunday afternoon in this historical spot is remarkable for the variety of its dissonant noises, most of it oratorical and a lot of it soap box. Hatless gents mount their portable platforms and start informing the gaustering pedestrians what is wrong with the world and what they propose to do about it.

As I came up to the bandstand, what seemed to be a peace demonstration was in full swing. People lolled on the benches in St. Petersburg style, listening to some throaty gentleman at a microphone who was ringing all the sharps and flats about the horrors of war.

I was past the place, but not far enough, when his booming voice roared, "And we will now close with our national anthem," and the band behind him on the platform broke into the strains. I stopped, faced the music and uncovered as all old soldiers do. Everybody in the vicinity did likewise, including a shabby-looking young fellow who'd been leaning against a tree, looking for all the world as if what he needed most was a cup of warm coffee, and practically a sure bet to ask the next passer for the price of one.

The band was only about as far as "By the dawn's early light" . . . when a couple of young fellows, came along and kept right on walking. They were tall, fresh and foreign looking, and, if they noticed the patriotic business at all, heard the music, or were aware of the silent, standing multitude, they saw fit to ignore the whole show. One was bareheaded but the other had his hat on, and kept it on.

"Take off that hat!" somebody called, the voice ringing above the roar of the band, and it was an order, not a request. "Take off that hat!" two or three more people yelled.

Taking the brim of the hat, the wearer merely pulled it down around his ears a little more firmly.

So far as I'm able to testify, that was his last conscious act, for the shabby-looking gentleman suddenly stepped loose from his tree. I saw Dempsey measure Firpo, Louis flatten Maxie Baer, Carnera strike the blow from which Ernie Schaaf never regained consciousness. But I have never seen any chin hit as hard as this nonpatriot's was.

His hat was removed, all right. It was removed by knocking the wearer as completely from under it as if it had been suspended on wires. The victim crashed into a two-point landing—both shoulder blades—against a fence post a good 10 feet away. The hat dropped like a parachute, or a fried egg, exactly where he'd stood upon the pavement.

The struck gentleman's friend ran. The struck gentleman lay there. He's there yet, for all I know, for he was colder than New Year's in Nome the last I saw, and a couple of policemen were feeling for his pulse.

I'm not recommending any such, you understand. I'm only a reporter and a connoisseur of the almost lost art of really knuckling the kisser. But being a reporter, and therefore whatever is the masculine for handmaiden of the truth, I am obliged to state that Soose vs. Overlin left me as cold as a mentholated bath, but the surging thrill of that Sabbath sock has kept me warm for a week.

This Morning

With Skirley Povich

Out at Buddy Baer's Olney, Md., training camp, five guys have discovered nature and are saying it's wonderful when you get to know it. Into their lives have come the trilling of the birds in the trees, the morning sun, flowers and the dew, and out of their lives has gone the idea that it's stuff only for the poets.

POVICH

Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, with a title fight only six days distant, is puttering around the flower boxes of the old mansion, a water sprinkler in each hand and tenderness in his eye. Trainer Izzy Kline, a denizen of Chicago's Loop, is taking deep breaths outdoors, now convinced that for 40 years he was wrong about fresh-air poisoning. Assistant Trainer Jerry Cassale, long an habitue of the better joints in Newark, is up betimes, no longer tumbling out of bed at the crack of noon.

Buddy Baer, himself, wants a place just like Steve Cochrane's acres when he's ready to retire from the ring. Not completely converted is Harry Mendel, who writes publicity for Mike Jacob's fight promotions between running his own six-day bike races. Mendel admits "a guy oughta appreciate this country stuff, I guess, but it's too quiet at night. How can I sleep?" He gets around that problem by sleeping downtown at a Fourteenth Street hotel where the blend of street cars, busses and auto horns more nearly approaches the New York lullaby.

All is not hustle and bustle at Olney. Pop Hoffman, stripped to his trousers and silken undershirt can't be bothered much with Baer's workouts. For a week, he's been trying to understand the workings of the place's artesian well and the wonders of water running up a pipe. Izzy Kline, now a positive fresh-air fiend, is beginning to think that after two more weeks at Olney he can lick Joe Louis himself. Cassale has discovered that the sun rises in the East every day, just like people have been saying. Only Mendel remains distrustful. "There must be an angle to all this apple-pie," says Harry.

The customer who drives up to the Olney camp preparatory to plunking down his half buck to see Baer work out is greeted, in fact, by an angle as he approaches the place. A huge sign informs him that he is entering "Jerry Cassale's Training Camp." It is not Buddy Baer's training camp, nor Ancil Hoffman's training camp nor yet Steve Cochrane's, but "Jerry Cassale's." Here's the angle:

When Max Baer was training for one of his important fights at Speculator, N. Y., the wooden bleachers collapsed and sent hundreds of paying fans crashing. "That cost us $14,000 to settle the claims," explained Hoffman. "We had that kind of money, and the people knew it." Hoffman's fighters no longer train in camps operated by themselves. "This is Jerry's camp," says Hoffman. "If anything happens, they gotta sue him, see? And they can't collect more than a man's capacity to pay. Understand?"

Cassale is a per diem worker with the Hoffman-Baer firm, and perhaps the most interesting character in the outfit. Hoffman took him to London a few year's ago when Max Baer fought Tommy Farr and when the party landed at Liverpool, Scotland Yard dicks took Cassale in charge. English newspapers had intimated Hoffman was, bringing along a gunman to protect his interests and after one look at Cassale the agents seized upon him as the guy who was certainly the tough hombre. They strewed his baggage all over the pier in a search for the rods Cassale was supposed to be carrying.

The gang at Olney doesn't show any special awe of Joe Louis. If Baer has any misgivings about his fate, he's hiding 'em like a superb actor. He prattles along about this being the chance of his life and says he's never been afraid of anybody. Izzy Kline confides to everybody that Baer is going to knock Louis out and was saying the other day, in a burst of logic, "Louis may be a better fighter than he used to be, but one thing they can't toughen up is a guy's chin."

Hoffman, who is "Pop" to everybody around the place, draws a sharp comparison between Buddy Baer and Max. "This kid is like his father. Max was like his mother. She was Irish and Maxie had her temperament. He was flighty. Buddy is a ringer for his dad, even to the brown hair. He's serious, easier to handle, and thinks better than Maxie."

They're fatalistic about the whole thing at Olney. "It's not going to be a fancy fight," says Hoffman. "Buddy's going to be knocked down and stopped, or he's going to come away with that title. Nobody's going to win a decision, because there isn't going to be a decision. We're not going to box Louis because we can't beat him that way. I'm sending Buddy out to punch with him. I don't think Louis will like that."

Gene Sarazen Sizes Up the Open Field

New York, May 18.—Gene Sarazen, who came within a long putt of winning the 1940 Golf Open, believes that he and Lawson Little, the 1940 winner, and Pvt. Porky Oliver, who tied Little and Sarazen but was disqualified, won't be near when the officials award first prize at the open next month in Fort Worth.

CONSIDINE

"This is a Texan's year," Gene said today. "I look for either Ben Hogan or Bryon Nelson to win the championship. I've studied that Colonial Country Club layout at Fort Worth and you're a goner if you don't hit straight tee shots. That's why I don't believe that Sam Snead can win it, as overdue as he is. You've got to be down the middle on every hole. Just as Hogan and Nelson are. Of the two I like Hogan's chances better."

Gene's on no dead one there. Spraddle-legged, leather-faced Ben is leading the country's pros in all three important departments. He has won $8,067 in tournaments since January 1, winnings which put him far ahead of second place Sam Snead, who has pocketed $5,961. Ben also has 250 points to Snead's 213 and third place Craig Wood's 169 in the competition for the P. G. A. Vardon trophy, given each year to the pro who finishes highest in the greatest number of important tournaments.

A Preview of Open Championship

In addition, Ben has had the dazzling average of 70.44 in the 47 rounds of competition he has participated in this year. This tops Henry Picard, Snead, Nelson and Wood in that order.

The Hogan man, plus the 14 other best (or best known) pros in the country will gather Thursday at Fresh Meadow to play in one of the best tournaments ever concocted, the $5,000 Goodall Round Robin. Hogan won it last year with some utterly brilliant shot-making. That he is hotter than ever can be understood from the fact that he has not been out of the money in his last 47 tournaments. But, hot as he is, you can still get six or seven to one if you want to bet on him.

That's because every other prominent top drawer pro is going to be in there, trying to take him and the fresh Meadow Courts apart. Anyone in the field except Hogan can win. Among these are Craig Wood, who finished dead last in last year's round robin, yet spun the golf world on its ear by winning the masters in April. Oliver, granted four days furlough from Camp Dix, where the corpulent corporal is serving out a draft year, is in excellent form. So is Jimmy Demaret, the light-hearted guy who has been training for six weeks for this one. And Byron Nelson, or Clayton Heafner. Not to overlook Sarazen himself, champion of America as far back as 1922, but still a potent force in the game today—especially at Fresh Meadow, where he won the 1932 Open by shooting the last 28 holes in 100 knocks.

Quick, Boy, the Jenkins Obituaries

If Friday night's fight was a sample of what we can expect in the immediate future from Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins, then we'd better get along with the obituaries of his career. The Sweetwater scarecrow looked about as much like a world champion as I do. He didn't know the first thing about in-fighting, nor footwork, nor ring guile. The durable Bob Montgomery handled him like a baby, hitting him ten to one in the close exchanges, which Referee Eddie Josephs broke up so often that the crowd, which had made Montgomery a 9-to-5 favorite, brayed heartily.

When Jenkins' punch leaves him he becomes the worst piece of fighting machinery to hold a title in many years. There is absolutely nothing else he can do in the ring, including protect himself. His defense is his offense. When the punch goes, everything goes. And it went in a hurry Friday night against Montgomery.

Montgomery will have trouble boiling out to 135 pounds for a return match for the title. But it will be worth his while. For he is a dead cinch to beat Jenkins. We don't think that Lew could even save his title by giving up his hard-living, candle-burning style of life. Which sacrifice, of course, Lew hasn't the faintest thought of making.

Tommy Ferrick Replaces Babich In Fifth to Halt Cleveland Streak

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 18.—Rookie Tommy Ferrick turned in a brilliant relief job to win his first game of the season as the Athletics ended a five-game winning streak for the pace-setting Cleveland Indians, 10 to 3.

Ferrick was rushed to the mound in place of Johnny Babich with one out in the fifth inning when Babich's shoulder muscles became stiff. He uncorked a wild pitch that let in a Cleveland run, but thereafter only one Cleveland runner reached second. Altogether he gave up only four hits to finish out a six-hitter.

Babich, making his first appearance since suffering a sore arm in spring training, allowed only two hits. One of them was a two-run homer by Jeff Heath in the second inning.

Calvin Dorsett, a rookie, started for the Indians, but gave up three runs in the first on singles by Al Brancato, Benny McCoy and Sam Chapman and a triple by Bib Johnson. He gave way to Joe Heving in the second after Pete Suder

Wright Pounds Out 4 Straight Hits; Kuhel Gets Triple, Double in Slugfest

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

In the nostalgic presence of 16,000 fans who remembered when fat Taft Wright and slender Joe Kuehel used to swing their bats for the Nats, that pair returned to Griffith Stadium yesterday and paced the White Sox to a 10-5 victory.

Between them, Wright and Kuhel mopped up the Nats, who were merely a good five-inning ball club yesterday. The stout Mr. Wright bashed out four consecutive hits, knocked four runs across the plate and scoerd two himself. Kuhel unloaded a double and triple against the Washington pitching, and slugged home the important winning run.

It was "I Am an American Day" at Griffith Stadium but "Auld Lang Sayne" might have been the theme. The Nats' old friends in the Chicago lineup wrecked 'em. Coincident with the Cleveland Indians' defeat at Philadelphia, the second-place White Sox moved to within four games of the league lead.

Score Four in First

Clark Griffith, and Managers Bucky Harris and Jimmy Dykes, who led the parade to center field for the flag-raising ceremonies had scarcely followed the Western High School Company K drill champions of the field, when the White Sox took charge. They cuffed Steve Sundra around for four runs in the first inning.

Sundra reformed thereafter to hold the White Sox in check until the Nats tied the score at 5-5 in the fifth by knocking Bill Dietrick out of the box, but the White Sox weren't through. They had made only 9 of their 16 hits, at that point, and started to slug Washington pitching around again.

They broke the 5-5 tie in the seventh after Cecil Travis had muffed Appling's ground ball. Kuhel whaled a triple against the center field wall and Wright made his fourth straight hit—a single to right that produced the winning runs. They banged the relief pitching of Arnold Anderson for a run in the eigrth and knocked Ken Chase loose from two more in the ninth.

Buck Ross relieved Dietrich in the Nats' three-run fifth inning and

Lefty Gomez Beats Browns For Yanks, 12-2

By the Associated Press

New York, May 18.—Lefty Gomez, who lost a three-hitter the last time he pitched against the St. Louis Browns, got ample revenge for that defeat today as he held the Brownies to six safeties while his fellow Yankees were collecting 16 for a 12-to-2 triumph.

Every man in the Yankee lineup joined in the festivities, even Gomez himself getting two hits. But Joe Gordon was the big gun with five runs batted in, three on his seventh homer of the year, while Joe Di Maggio had three hits, including a double, in as many official tries.

A double by Johnny Lucadello, a walk and a double steal gave the Browns their first run in the first. They got the other in the second on Harlond Clift's four-bagger, but from then on Gomez had them tamed, with not a man getting past second for the last seven innings.

Bosox Errors Give Detroit 6-5 Edge in11th

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 18.—Two infield errors in the eleventh inning gave Detroit two unearned runs and a 6-5 victory over the Red Sox today before a 23,000 crowd. That easy triumph, the fourth straight for the Tigers, boosted them into third place over the Bosox, who have dropped their last four games.

With one out in the eleventh and the score tied, 4-4, Paddy Mullin singled and Dick Newsome, who had relieved Lefty Bob Grove in the eighth, passed Bruce Campbell. Rudy York grounded to Jim Tabor and Campbell was forced at second. While attempting a double play, Odell Hale threw the ball into his own dugout and Mullin scored to break the deadlock. York then came home from second when Manager Joe Cronin bobbled Charley Gehringer's grounder.

With two out in Boston's side, Jimmy Foxx poled out his fifth homer of the season. Tabor followed with a double, but Hale fanned to close the game.

The Red Sox put on a four-run rally to tie the count against Starter Buck Newsom in the seventh. Foxx also started those fireworks with a single and, after Tabor homered, Hale, Johnny Peacock and Dom DiMaggio singled and Stan Spence was passed. Al Benton then took over and wound up as the winning pitcher. Newsome was charged with the loss.

Derringer Ends Reds' Losing Streak, 4-3

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 18.—Big Paul Derringer, whose victory over Chicago a week ago yesterday was followed by the Cincinnati Reds' longest losing streak in more than 300 games, ended the setback today at six by whipping the Boston Braves 4 to 3.

A crowd of 10,599, smallest Sunday turnout here in two years, saw the game.

Derringer got into trouble in the second and third when Boston scored its three runs, but he blanked Casey Stengel's team from there on. He allowed seven hits and fanned nine.

Helped by two timely singles by Chuck Aleno, rookie, called up from Indianapolis to play third for the ailing Bill Werber, the Reds staged rallies in their halves of the frames that Boston scored.

Cincinnati made 11 hits against three Braves pitchers, forcing Jim Tobin from the mound with none out in the second and sending Joe Sullivan off the hill in the third. Tom Earley finished the game, giving only five hits.

Dodgers Bow To Cubs, 7-4; French Wins

Chicago, May 18.—The swashbuckling Brooklyn Dodgers, riding the crest of the National League with 22 victories in their last 26 games, bowed today to the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 4, before 26,357 spectators.

The Cubs, handicapped all the way by shoddy fielding, finally knocked Whitlow Wyatt, Dodger ace, out of the box in the seventh inning. The loss ended Wyatt's wnining streak at seven straight games and marked the first time this season he has been knocked out of the box. He has made nine starts.

The Dodgers failed to earn a single run off the steady pitching of Southpaw Larry French. The Cubs took a one-run lead in the first inning on doubles by Stan Hack and Dominic Dallessandro. Brooklyn tied the count in the second when Pete Reiser opened with

Rocksie Takes Skyscraper Class at Meadowbrook

Rocksie Wins Over Hi-Rock Pompo; Tar Boy Captures Open Championship

By Anne Hagner

Margaret Cotter & Co. staged a revival of a 2-year-old drama as the and Rocksie jumped 6 feet 3 inches in the skyscraper class of the Washington Horse Show yesterday to duplicate their 1939 record-breaking performance, when they went the same height in the same class at the Meadowbrook show grounds.

In a jump-off with the Hi-Rock Farm's highminded chestnut, Hi-Rock Pompo, Miss Cotter's mount first refused the big fence and then went over it faultlessly to win the blue. Pompo, with Joe Green up, had already sent the top pole earthward so that he received the second ribbon.

During the awards, ringmen had left standing a 6½-foot fence so that Green, as a final fillip to the occasion, jumped over it on the way out of the ring, just to prove that it was possible. Because it was not done in actual competition, the trial had no effect on Miss Cotter's mark.

Miss Cotter Spilled

A few moments after the big leap, Miss Cotter took a hard spill from Martin Vogel, jr.'s Demas in the ladies' hunters class, but was uninjured, and came back in the next class, the triple bar, to again win a blue ribbon with Rocksie after two-jump-offs.

Despite out-jumping everything at Meadowbrook in the skyscraper, Miss Cotter surrendered all ideas of upholding her earlier strong bid for the jumper championship when she decided against showing her horse in the final class of the day, the touch-and-out, which gave final points toward the tri-color. Figuring that both she and Rocksie had enough jumping, they stayed by the paddock fence as C. V. Henkle's Tar Boy took the blue ribbon and assured himself of the open championship for his Statesville, N. C., owner. Ed Daniels rode the gelding, who amassed 21 points.

The reserve went to Bryn Du Cadet, who was second to Tar Boy in the touch-and-out to total 18 points for Mrs. Sally Jones Sexton. Rocksie likewise had 18 tallies, but Miss Cotter defaulted.

Takes Double Victories

Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill's Inky wasn't even visible to the handful who remained long after dark for the hunter championships, but she was a prominent figure in the minds of the judges as she took both the conformation and the working titles, alternately ridden by Delma Twyman and Susan Fuller.

Harper Wins Va. Open; Snead Second

By the Associated Press

Ocean View, Va., May 18.—Chandler Harper, the slender professional from the Glenshealiah Club, of Portsmouth, today retained his Virginia Open golf crown with the finest brand of golf in the history of the State Open Tournament.

Harper put together rounds of 69-68—137 to give him a 72-hole total of 274, ten under par, four strokes ahead of the field and three strokes better than the record 277 which won the 1936 tournament at Newport News.

In the battle until the last hole was Slammin' Sammy Snead, the Hot Springs pro who packs one of the heftiest wallops in the game, but the magic in his driver was missing from his putter, and he finished four strokes back with a 278. Snead shot 68-69—137 today.

Third money went to Wee Bobby Cruickshank, Country Club of Virginia veteran from Richmond and six times holder of the title, who played around with the two leaders. Bobby had 69-71—140 for a 72-hole total of 282.

Wynsol Spencer, former State amateur champion from Newport News, with a total of 288, State Amateur Champion Sam Bates, of Norfolk, with 294, and Ducky Miller, of Ocean View, with 297 took the three prizes offered for the three leading amateurs.

Preview of 4 Louis Title Fights:

Louis Comes From Floor to Stop Baer After a Fierce Battle

Challenger Drops Champion Twice Before Referee Stops Championship Fight in Third

(This is the first of a series of four articles by Bob Considine, previewing Joe Louis' probable performances against the four challengers who will attempt to lift the Brown Bomber's title during the summer. Each one of the four forthcoming fights is described as if Considine were writing from the ringside.)

By Bob Considine

New York, May 18.—It is the night of May 23. The City of Washington is about to witness its first heavyweight championship fight. About 30,000 spectators (estimated gate, $150,000) have come out to Griffith Stadium to see the drowsy, over-confident Louis do battle against Buddy Baer, Max's little brother.

Washington's well-to-do Harlem has turned out in droves to watch its idol fight for the first time. Dollar-a-year men, with their fashionably dressed parties, rim the ringside. High and low Government officials sit in the glow of the ring lights.

The mammoth, baby-faced challenger outweighs the champion by 40 pounds and towers 6 inches over him as they huddle in their robes in the center of the ring, getting their tense instructions from the referee. But the crowd has installed Louis as a 1-to-5 shot. The odds, however, are dropping. There are more and more bettors in the crowd who are taking a flier on Baer, in the hope that he will keep his word and shoot the works against Louis.

ROUND ONE

ROUND TWO

Louis prowls off his stool with the manner of a cat playing with a helpless mouse. But Buddy begins to fight him differently. The big fellow has taken a pitiless scolding from little Izzy Kline, his trainer, during the rest period, wherein Kline reminded him of his lessons in picturesque language. Somewhat surprised, Louis permits Buddy to get in close and rough him, and lean on him. Unscathed in this first conflict, in close, Baer's spirits rise. He sees an opening and with the desperation of a man who is not too courageous he lets fly and staggers Louis with a great right-hand punch. He is almost as shocked as Louis.

It topples Louis, but the stout-hearted champion comes up from the floor, his brain a little foggy. In the ear-splitting noise of the mob, and the suddenly unleashed hysteria of the match, Baer wades into Louis in a rough and tumble reissue of an old Dempsey-Firpo movie. He cannot quite connect with the vital punch, but he floors Louis again and then, to his utter dismay, is floored himself when Joe, fighting with the same blind instinct that he showed when Schmeling and Galento hurt him, lands a crushing left hook to Buddy's temple.

It is a savage round that has the crowd standing on the chairs. Armweary, Baer stops throwing leather, and lets the dazed champion, whose pride has been hurt to the quick, come back at him as the bell ends the thrilling chapter. The seconds of both men rush into the ring to guide them back to their corners.

ROUND THREE

Baer, convinced now that he can make it, and that he is on the verge of winning the title, bounces out, and after a few futile jabs starts to get in close to Joe, whose in-fighting is no better than ever this night. But Louis, whipped into a jungle fury he hasn't known for two years, steps back and crumples Baer with a left hook, then floors him thunderously with a whistling right. Numbly, dumbly, unbelieving, Buddy gets up and tries to fight back. He lands on Louis, though deaf to the howling instructions of his corner to cover up and hold on. But Louis takes the punch and fights back at the huge target with an attack that starts at Buddy's middle, to bring his hands down, and ends on Buddy's head.

He can't finish Buddy, for Joe is still rocky from the punishment he took in the second round, when Baer stood within inches of the title. His bad right hand has gone, too. He chops away at Buddy with the left. And Buddy seems to be about to achieve a miracle when he suddenly drops his arms. The sickness of defeat suffuses his vast frame with a wave of resignation. The referee steps in to do what Louis wouldn't do—stop this unexpectedly thrilling fight.

Our Daze . . .

Angry Baer Promises Kayo; 6,400 See Louis at Riverside

By Al Hailey

Buddy Baer lost his temper long enough yesterday to forecast without any mental reservations that he'll knock out Joe Louis when he meets the heavyweight champion Friday night in Griffith Stadium.

It was the first display of ill temper on the part of the personable young brother of the former world's all-talking champion, Madcap Maxie, since they started feeding him a pound of raw meat a day to whip him into the mood to take up wnere Maxie left off.

In case you don't remember, Maxie left off in the fourth round in 1935 after being slapped to one knee by the aforesaid Louis.

A collection of some 200 curious fans turned out but what they saw was not Buddy getting mad. They saw a 6-foot-6 speciman of young America playing tag with two sparring partners whose combined fighting techniques are about as outdated as the Gatling gun.

Buddy's tantrum came after he had finished five rounds of lumbering around the ring with Elza Thompson, 230-pound colored behemoth, and Babe Ritchie, the 198-pounder, whom Max once flattened in two rounds.

Informed by his brain trust that various critics, including this department, were disappointed in his general good will to all men, Buddy flew into a rage.

"What do they expect me to do—go out and try to break up my hands murdering a couple of good sparring partners?" he demanded.

The circus has left town, but a reasonable facsimile thereof—namely, Joe Louis & Co.—lingered on yesterday at Riverside Stadium.

The Brown Bomber held court with a sell-out crowd of 6,400 admirers sitting in the cheering section, and after a six-round session of effortless sparring there was an untabulated registration of sympathy for Buddy Baer.

Louis' stretch drive in preparation for the seventeenth defense of his heavyweight crown Friday night in the ball park came as the climax to a day which furnished everything from exhibition boxing to tumbling acts.

Promoter Ray Alvis, Mike Jacobs' Washington agent, expects to realize more profit for himself than from the 15-round title match—which from all indications is going to live up to the $150,000 figure pre-

Distance Horses Compete in Charles Town Feature Today

Welsh Lad Will Tackle Five Rivals

Annikin, Hot Man Seek Purse in Test; Sprinters on Card; Business Is Good

While most race tracks simply stamp the opening day of a racing week as "Blue Monday" and make no effort to brush up their programs, the Charles Town Jockey Club treats that day as a Wednesday or a Saturday and always offers a big race. Today the West Virginia track tops its Monday card with the $1,000 Martinsburg Purse, marking the first time at the meeting that the feature route has been over a mile and a sixteenth route.

A field of six has been named over night for the battle and includes two horses who were easy winners in races at this track, two others who were in the money in previous starts and two who will be making their 1941 debuts at Charles Town. Racing Secretary Freddie Burton has distributed weights in a manner that seems to point to a keen struggle.

Welsh Lad Competes

Three horses share the top assignment of 114 pounds. They are Mrs. G. H. Pearce's Welsh Lad, winner by more than four lengths in his first outing; Dr. H. B. Langdon's Groucher's Boy, a winner and a second at the meeting to date, and Mrs. W. Anderson's Hot Man, in the money in four of his last five starts in 1940.

Brooke Johns' Annikin, a winner in Florida last winter, and A. C. Yzquierdo's Maebeau, a Havana performer this year, will march postward carrying 109 pounds. D. J. Sullivan's Broomoria, who closed like the wind last out, will round out the field and carry 104 pounds.

The feature, listed in sixth position on the card, will be supported by a secondary that is an excellent race, on paper at least. This event will be over the Charles Town course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs and the line-up is fairly boiling over with speed. Remolee, Clocks and Navigation, winner of sprints this year, will tackle Pimlico Lady, Pandoramint, Ann Groucher and others. Despite the claim of apprentice allowance, Clocks has top weight of 114 pounds.

The first week of racing at Charles Town showed the sport to be stepping along at about the same increase in betting and attendance as was recorded on the Maryland milers. Off tracks during the final days of the week failed to have an effect on business or the caliber of racing.—HAIGHT.

Miller Nine Snaps Brewers' Streak, 7 to 2

Frank Watt Holds Losers To 7 Hits

Miller, of Losers, Homers; Archie Via Smacks Double With Bases Full

An up-and-coming band of diamonders under the banner of Miller Furniture ended the Heurich Brewers' unbeaten streak in the National City A League yesterday, grabbing undisputed first place for themselves with a 7-to-2 victory on the East Ellipse.

For the Brewers it was the first defeat this season in either Sunday or weekday play. Their pitchers, Fotch Mathias and Art Lacey, were soundly trounced by Miller's Frank Watt, who gave up 7 scattered hits to the 12 registered off them. A home run by Heurich's Reds Miller in the fifth, featured the hitting, though Archie Via's double with the bases loaded in the sixth was the blow which locked up the decision for Miller.

In second place, along with Heurich, Naiman Photos and Frank Small, was the Jacobsen Florist nine which yesterday smashed Taft A. C., 10-4, at Taft Playground. Al Kimmel hurled seven-hit ball for the winners for eight innings, giving over to Eddie Vermillion. The losing pitchers were B. Smith and Bausch, who were touched for 17 safeties.

Frank Small, putting on a drive in the stretch, tripped Orange Disc, 8-4, and Naiman Photos hung an identical beating on Prince Georges Police Boys Club.

In B Section of the circuit, Perry's Restaurant started with 13 runs in the first inning and wound up with a 20-3 decision over Southern Oxygen in the feature. Arrow Cab turned back the Carolina Rebels, 12-2.

Brothers Fight It Out for Cycle Lead . . . and the Winner

Chisox Defeat Nats, 10 to 5; Wright and Kuhel Star

did a superb job of it until the ninth when he had to call on help from Thornton Lee. Lewis' single and a pair of walks filled the bases for the Nats with two out in the ninth and halted the movement toward the exits, but Lee appeared on the scene and disposed of Pinch Hitter Johnny Welaj, personally, on a ground ball into the box for the concluding out.

With two out in the third, the Nats bounced back with two runs against Dietrich. Cramer beat out a hit to Lodigiani, and Vernon scored when Lodigiani muffed Travis' pop fly in short left.

All of a sudden, in the fifth, the Nats tied the score with a three-run uprising against Dietrich. Vernon got a single on a bad hop over Lodigiani's head, Lewis singled to left and Travis doubled to left. With one run home and one out after Bloodworth popped up, Chapman lined a hit through Dietrich's glove, and when Dietrich threw wild past first after recovering the ball, Travis followed Lewis across the plate, and Chapman reached second. Dietrich was withdrawn and Ross stopped the attack. He passed Early purposely, and then filled the bases by walking Sundra, but with only one out. The Nats got nothing more, because Case flied to Kreevich in short center and Cramer grounded out.

In the seventh, the White Sox untied the score with the help of Travis' second error of the game. With one out, he muffed Appling's grounder, and it was then that Kuhel drove in the winning run with a triple to left center. Just to be mean about it, Wright made his fourth straight hit to knock Kuhel home. That pair was mixed up, actually, in eight of the ten Chicago runs of the afternoon.

Giants Rally, Barely Beat Pirates, 5-4

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 18.—The New York Giants spotted the Pittsburgh Pirates four runs in the first two innings today and then came on like Whirlaway in the stretch to win by a nose, 5-4.

It was the Giants' fourth straight victory and the end of a three-game winning streak for the Buccos.

Rookie Ace Adams and Walter Brown "jockeyed" the Giants home in front by collaborating in seven innings of scoreless relief hurling. Adams was the winning pitcher, entering the game in the third and giving way to Brown in the seventh after the Giants had scored three runs needed to win.

Babe Young drove Burgess Whitehead home with the payoff run after singles by Pinch-hitter Joe Moore and John Rucker and two Pirate errors had accounted for two runs. The Giants broke into the scoring in the fifth inning with two runs.

That Cecil B. DeMille believes in realism in casting is being pretty well shown in his presentation of the recent screen play, "Model Wife," over WJSV and the Columbia network in "Radio Theater" at 8 p. m. tonight.

He could have filled the husband and wife roles in the play with his choice of Hollywood actors and actresses. But Mr. DeMille wouldn't deceive his vast radio audience so. The main roles are being played by a real husband and wife—Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, known as something of a model couple in the movie colony.

As a matter of fact, though, this particular method of getting the real thing in play-acting is nothing new on "Radio Theater." Within the past few months husband and wife roles in the radio series usually have been played by real husbands and wives. Recently you've heard Fredric March and Florence Eldridge, Fibber McGee and Molly, Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone, George Burns and Gracie Allen and Tyrone Power and Annabella, all playing domestic roles on "Radio Theater," as well as in fact.

"Model Wife" concerns the involvements of a young married couple both of whom are employed in an office which forbids marriages of any of its young women.

U. S. 'Ceiling' To Cut Cotton Yarn Prices

Price "ceilings" lower than current market prices will be imposed on combed cotton yarns within a few days, Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, said yesterday.

Henderson conferred with representatives of the industry three weeks ago, and he said he had hoped this meeting would lead to improvement in the "speculative price situation."

"Such improvement has not taken place," he added.

The ceilings will be below current prices, Henderson asserted, "to discourage any notion that an industry can run up prices at a period when a price ceiling is being anticipated with the idea that the ceiling will be established at speculative levels."

He said that there "is no justification whatsoever for the current level of prices."

Under Current Price

The ceiling to be imposed will be based on a price of 40 cents a pound for 30s single ply yarn with a possible adjustment not exceeding two cents to allow for recent advances in raw material costs. Such yarn is now selling for about 52 cents a pound. Ceilings for other grades will be established in relation to the 40-cent basis, Henderson said.

Meanwhile, in an effort to speed defense production, the Government arranged yesterday for 500 manufacturers to obtain scarce metals and other materials of limited supply under a simplified system of priorities.

E. R. Stettinius, jr., defense director of priorities, announced that the plan would be tried experimentally with a list of firms which make such things as small industrial motors, portable tools, chains and scientific instruments. Officials indicated that if the plan proved effective it would be extended later to other manufacturers.

The system is intended to eliminate such of the involved procedure now required to obtain priorities, or preference ratings.

How System Works

Officials explained that the system, called the defense supplies rating plan, was intended for use of manufacturers who do an "off-the-shelf" business calling for immediate deliveries on orders.

The firms will estimate how much of their output goes into defense work and then will be allowed priorities automatically on that portion of their raw materials. For instance, it was said, a tool maker who estimates that 60 per cent of his goods are used in defense will be entitled to preferential delivery on 60 per cent of the steel that he buys.

Under present practice, such a manufacturer could not obtain the priority on steel until he had received a defense order for his product.

Officials said that the present system of individual priority certificates would be continued and the new plan was intended to supplement it only in the case of certain kind of factories.

Crucial Role Held Possible For France

The Foreign Policy Association said yesterday that France—rather than Germany's Axis partner, Italy—might be cast for a relatively important role in the Reich's "new order in Europe" provided France turns her back on Britain and the United States.

This possibility was mentioned, without elaboration, in a report of the association, a privately funded group.

"The Germans envisage for Europe a sort of political hierarchy, with the German 'master race' at the top and other national groups arranged, pyramid fashion, in accordance with their degree of kinship or readiness for collaboration with the 'new order,'" the report said.

"Modest Part" for Spain

"Under such a system it is conceivable that the Dutch and Scandinavians, regarded as akin to the Germans, might—once they abandon their present passive resistance—be treated better and granted a larger measure of autonomy than the Poles and Czechs . . .

"The Spanish people, too, might be assigned a modest part in the 'new order,' their most important task being that of drawing Spanish-speaking Latin America into the orbit of a German-dominated Europe."

The report, by Vera Micheles Dean, research director of the association, declares that "definition of peace aims is an essential part of military strategy," and that postponement of discussion of peace aims "is to foster among belligerents nad neutrals alike a mental unpreparedness for peace, potentially as dangerous as the mental unpreparedness for war which paralyzed the Western powers after 1933."

Repugnant to Many Germans

"If Britain and the United States want to win the German people away from National Socialism—whose philosophy and methods are repugnant to many Germans—they must do more . . . demonstrate, by concrete actions in time of war, that they sincerely plan to undertake throughgoing reconstruction in time of peace," Mrs. Dean said, adding:

"Since Britain, whatever the outcome of the war, may prove too economically exhausted to take the leadership in peacetime reconstruction, the decision of the United States may determine the character of the new world order."

Board Asks Classification Of U. S. Land

Classification of all land in the United States as to its suitability for crops, forests, cities, mining, pasture and recreation, was recommended to President Roosevelt yesterday by the National Resources Planning Board.

A report by the board's land committee said there were "wide gaps in present knowledge of land resources."

The committee urged:

"That land classification be recognized as desirable and in many cases essential in the appraisal of land resources, in the solution of land-use problems, in the formulation and execution of land-use programs, in the integration of different programs of land use, and in the development of policies under which the country's land resources will be utilized for the good of local, State, regional and national interests.

"That in the future, as in most cases in the past, land-classification surveys be staffed by competent personnel and directed by administrators experienced in the organization of land-classification work to specific problems and programs.

"That the land committee of the National Resources Planning Board undertake a survey of urban land classification.

"That the National Resources Planning Board establish a continuing committee to act as a central clearing house for land-classification information and for land-classification organizations."

The report suggested that maps should be made showing soil resources, mineral resources, recreational resources, native vegetation resources and water resources.

The land committee is headed by Prof. William I. Myers, of Cornell University.

A.F.L., C.I.O. Enter Last Lap Of Ford Race

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 18.—Rival unions of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor today began final spirited drives for victory in Wednesday's National Labor Relations Board election among 83,000 workers of the Ford Motor Co's. Rouge and Lincoln plants.

More than 80,000 hourly-rated employes are listed as eligible to vote at the Rouge plant, and NLRB officials said it would be the largest election of its kind held at a single factory.

Workers at the two plants may pick either the United Automobile Workers-C. I. O. or the A. F. L.'s Federal Labor Union to represent them as collective bargaining agent, or they may designate their preference for no union.

Another 271 pattern makers employed at the Rouge plant will vote in a separate crafts election either for the U. A. W.-C. I. O., or the A. F. L. Pattern Makers' League or for no union.

Climaxing their election drive, U. A. W.-C. I. O. leaders will stage a mass meeting at 5:30 p. m. Monday. C. I. O. President Philip Murray heads the list of union officials scheduled to speak.

John J. Murphy, director of A. F. of L.'s Ford organizing drive, predicted victory for his union at a membership rally today.

Meanwhile, U. A. W.-C. I. O. officials, representing employes of 78 General Motors plants, today approved the agreement evolved last week by the National Defense Mediation Board settling a contract dispute between the union and the corporation.

The agreement, providing a wage increase of 10 cents an hour for the 160,000 employes now covered in the U. A. W.-C. I. O. contract with General Motors, will be submitted to the union membership for ratification at meetings during the next two weeks, leaders said. The agreement was approved by the union's executive board Saturday.

Watchman's Body Found in Ruins Of $1,000,000 Fire

Philadelphia, May 18 (AP).—The charred body of a 72-year-old watchman was found today in the ruins of a lumber yard swept by a $1,000,000 fire and Coroner Charles H. Hersch said he was investigating the possibility of murder.

The body of the watchman, Michael Regan, was found lying face upward in the center of the W. H. Lear Co. yard, origin of Thursday morning's fire that destroyed the yard, nearby houses and ate into the recently renovated Cramp shipyard in the city's teeming northeast industrial section. FBI and police have said there was a possibility saboteurs started the blaze.

The lumber company sells chiefly to defense firms while the shipyard has a contract for six Navy cruisers.

British Believed Chasing Nazi Ship Off Chile

Santiago, Chile, May 18 (AP).—A British freighter armed with a 6-inch cannon and two antiaircraft guns was believed tonight to be chasing at least one of five German freighters which sailed over the weekend from widely separated Chilean ports in an attempt to run the British blockade.

The Nazi ship Rhakotis, 6,173 tons, laden with general cargo, left Antofagasta 30 minutes before the British armed freighter Laguna, 6,466 tons, steamed out.

The departure of the five German ships cleared Chilean ports of all Nazi freighters. They had been in Chilean waters since the beginning of the war.

The 5,522-ton Frankfurt, sailed from Concepcion with lentils, ore concentrates and hides; the 1,220-ton sister ships, Quito and Bogota, sailed with ore concentrates from Coquimbo, and the 6,101-ton Erlangen sailed from Puerto Montt, in southern Chile, with meat, wool and cereals.

Excursion Boat Blast and Fire Leave 7 Killed, 14 Injured

By the Associated Press

Little River, S. C., May 18.—A terrific explosion aboard the excursion boat Nightingale off Little River Inlet today killed 7 of the 39 passengers and injured 14, one seriously. The boat burned to the water's edge.

The blast occurred while the craft was anchored in a calm sea about 12 miles out. At the time many of the men and women aboard were fishing under the midday sun.

The bodies of T. W. Cothran and G. A. Barber, both of Salisbury, N. C., and E. R. Griffin and George B. Barfield, both of Rocky Mount, N. C., were recovered. Unaccounted for and given up for dead were Grey Barber, jr., and Jerry Barber, brothers, sons of G. A. Barber, and Shelton Lesler, of Salisbury.

W. A. Warton, of Rocky Mount, a passenger aboard the Nightingale, said that some of the crew had been emptying gasoline from a 5-gallon container into soft-drink bottles.

The gasoline, he said, was poured into the carburetor while the engine was being worked on, and some of the liquid spilled. The gasoline, he said, somehow became ignited and the explosion followed.

"Fire seemed to break out everywhere," he said. "Some of the people became frightened and leaped into the ocean. The explosion destroyed all but a few of the life preservers.

"The passengers who were unable to get life preservers held frantically to pieces of timber and debris until they were picked up."

Thirty-two passengers and the crew of four were rescued by two other excursion boats.
